City to discuss business liaison position

Plan calls for upgrading Codes Division job

By Frank Boyett
270-831-8342

The long-awaited creation of a business development liaison will be taken up by the Henderson City Commission when it meets Tuesday evening.

For the past five years the city has tried to create an atmosphere more friendly to developers and more supportive toward "helping people work through issues when they're wanting to invest money or whatever," noted City Manager Russell Sights. The position was one of the recommendations presented to the commission by the Local Government Development Incentives Committee last fall.

"The commission indicated to us that was one of their priorities from the committee. We want to be positive and supportive when people want to develop and invest. Part of that is steering them along the right process to get to their conclusion.

"Government people sometimes take the easy way out when they don't know the answer to a question by saying 'no' rather than 'maybe' or 'yes.' We're emphasizing we need to start saying maybe or yes more often."

Much of the legwork on creating the position was done by Assistant City Manager William "Buzzy" Newman, who administers the codes administrator's office, Sights said, and the staff recommendation is to upgrade the administrative secretary position in the Codes Division currently held by Theresa Richey, which would boost her salary about $2,000 annually.

Many of the secretarial portion of her duties would be shifted to one of the Codes Division's two part-time office assistants, converting the chosen job to a full-time secretarial position.

With her background already in the Codes Division, along with being secretary to the city Board of Zoning Adjustment, Richey appears tailor-made to take on the new duties. She

Calendars waiting on delayed spring

Extended weather pattern has cold, wet grip on Kentucky

By Aimee Nielson
UK College of Agriculture

LEXINGTON – According to the calendar, it is officially spring; however, it seems someone forgot to tell the weather to act accordingly in the Bluegrass.

So what is going on? Did the groundhog lie? When is it going to get warmer? Will the rain and snow slow down?

University of Kentucky College of Agriculture meteorologists offered some explanation and hope.

"Simply put, the eastern half of the country is stuck in a negative Arctic weather pattern," said Tom Priddy, UK agricultural meteorologist. "That's a big part of the reason for the lingering cold and wet weather we have been experiencing."

Priddy said it means a blocking pattern has kept an enhanced trough of low pressure over the Eastern United States, which results in cooler temperatures.

"Kentucky is very susceptible to Canadian or even Arctic outbreaks," UK agricultural meteorologist Matthew Dixon added. "Fortunately, the pattern is going to break, but not before April."

Priddy said outlooks are trending toward above-normal temperatures in both April and the three-month outlook into June.

"That's a welcome sign for sure as Kentucky farmers and gardeners get further into the planting season," he said. "Some horticultural crops have already been delayed."

So, while temperatures will remain cool through the end of March, Kentucky will also continue in an unsettled and wet weather pattern.

Since the start of March, the state has averaged nearly 4 inches of rainfall — about an inch above normal.

A rain gauge on Center Street in Henderson has recorded 3.28 inches of precipitation this month as of late Friday afternoon, with more expected Saturday night and Sunday.

Ready, set — go for Easter eggs.

Kids of all ages toed the line Saturday morning at Community Park, eager to run as fast as their legs would carry them to scoop up the thousands of candy-filled plastic eggs covering the playground.

"It's controlled chaos," said Mark Simmons, the recreation program manager with the city of Henderson Parks and Recreation Department. "The kids love it and it's free. We do it just as a service from the Parks and Recreation Department."

LEFT: Yura Nagaoka, 4, stuffs her basket with eggs as her father, Taka Nagaoka, videotapes her. This is the 14th year for the event. The Nagaoka's are from Owensboro.

Organizers were out at 7:30 a.m. distributing throughout the park 10,000 colorful plastic eggs. The set up took about 2 and a half hours, but the hunt itself was over in a matter of minutes.

Tonya Abbott's sons, Isaac, 6, and Konner, 5, prepared themselves for the annual Easter egg hunt by doing warm-up exercises a few minutes before the start. The boys were on their best behavior all week so they could participate in the search for candy.

"We don't eat a lot of it at home, so this is kind of like a prize and a treat," Abbott said.

Snowy, rainy mix in forecast for the next couple of days

Gleaner staff

Rain should give way to snow today after sunset.

The National Weather Service in Paducah projected there was a chance for rain Saturday night, but expected the best chance to be between 1-4 a.m. Sunday morning, said meteorologist Robin Smith. More rain is likely to fall after 4 p.m. until about 7 Sunday night before changing over to snow.

The temperatures are expected to dip below freezing after midnight Sunday with a low around 29 degrees and stay at or below freezing until mid-morning Monday when the high is 36 degrees, Smith said. Snow accumulation is predicted to be about an inch, matching the predicted rainfall amount.

Beginning after sunset,

Where, oh where, was Steve Rust?

The director of the local Gathering Place senior center wasn't in his office and wasn't immediately visible in the interior of the vast building,

His administrative assistant, Lee Ann Key, had answered my phone call for Steve and sighed and replied, "He and his little Jazzy chair are buzzing around here."

She added, laughing, that when Steve got the Jazzy powered wheelchair a few weeks ago, "He said he was going to do wheelies in it and I threatened to take the battery out!"

That chair, "plugged in" each day when Steve leaves the center and all ready for his arrival the next morning, makes it possible for the 68-year-old Henderson native to work about six hours a day at the job he loves so much and visit with the dozens of center regulars.

When he developed his medical condition, he initially thought he'd retire on May 27, his original hire date 14 years ago.

Miner killed in cave-in missed death in 2007

The Associated Press

Elam Jones came close to death in a central Utah mine accident once before. He was preparing to begin his shift at the Crandall Canyon mine in August 2007 when a cave-in struck the section where he was to have worked, killing six miners and three rescuers.

The 28-year-old coal miner was not so lucky Friday. A tunnel roof collapsed at the Rhino Mine about 10 miles west of Huntington, killing him and sending a co-worker to the hospital.

Even though the earlier accident occurred only a few miles away, Jones loved his job and did not view it as particularly dangerous, said his mother Julie Jones, a Huntington city councilwoman.

"He loved the mine he was at and the men he worked with. They were family," she told The Associated Press on Saturday. "He always said he could get hit going to Salt Lake and get killed in a car wreck."

He also was a member of the ill-fated rescue team at the Crandall Canyon mine. Three rescuers died while trying to save the trapped miners. He later spoke at a vigil for those who died and were injured there.

"He told me that he had to be there. Those were his buddies," his mother said.

Jones also was an experienced outdoorsman who survived two avalanches and a serious ATV accident, his mother said.

A father of two young children, Jones' roots in coal mining went back four generations on his mother's side and three generations on his father's side. His father works for a nearby coal mine.

Coal miners love what they do because they consider themselves the "heartbeat of America," Julie Jones said. The coal they provide to power plants provides jobs for everyone and allows people to use microwaves, televisions and countless other things, she added.

"Elam was proud to be a coal miner," his mother said. "Unless you're a coal miner, you wonder why they do this. It's in their blood."

Friday's accident was the latest in a string of disasters to strike Huntington, a closely knit town of over 2,000.

Chip and Clip Clinic is Saturday

Gleaner staff

A pet microchipping and nail clipping clinic sponsored by a local animal rescue group will be offered Saturday in Henderson.

Pay It Forward Animal Welfare Network will conduct the Chip and Clip Clinic from 9 to 11 a.m. at Ma's Doggy Daycare and Grooming, 728 Second St.

Microchips will be $20 each, including registration, and nail clipping will be $5, PIF President Robin Dance said.

"If you have gotten an animal altered at one of our low-cost spay-neuter clinics, we will take $5 off the chip, making them $15," Dance said. "It is a great deal and a great way to do something special for your pets."

Titanic exhibit coming to Lexington museum

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON – Artifacts from the Titanic will be exhibited later this year at the Lexington Center Museum & Gallery.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reports remnants from the worst maritime disaster will be displayed at the facility from Oct. 5-Jan. 26. Lexington Center CEO and president Bill Owen says people are fascinated with the story of the 1,500 people who died when the massive ship sank in the Atlantic Ocean a century ago.

Titanic: The Artifact Exhibition has typically been shown at venues in bigger cities, and Owen said it was an accomplishment for the relatively new museum to secure it.

He said officials decided to announce it early enough that schools could plan to bring groups of students.

Owen said the allure of the ship's tragic tale was made evident in the success of the 1997 movie Titanic.

"It is one of the most compelling stories in American history," he said.

Those who visit the exhibit will receive a boarding pass with the name of a real passenger, then can explore the ship's conception, construction, rooms and services. Afterward, they can experience the final hours before the ship sank. A memorial at the end reveals whether the person named on the boarding pass survived.

It contains 125 artifacts from the shipwreck and recreates rooms that were aboard the ship.

Hay bales catch fire on Middle Delaware

Gleaner staff

Middle Delaware Road was closed for about an hour Saturday after a trailer full of hay bales caught on fire.

A man driving a pickup was turning onto Middle Delaware Road at the intersection with Barren Church Road when he looked in his rearview mirror and saw that the hay he was hauling was smoking, said Glenn Powell, assistant fire chief with Niagara Fire Department. He stopped to call 911 and then unhooked the trailer so the pickup wouldn't catch fire, burning his hand in the process.

Niagara Fire Department was dispatched at 10:48 a.m. along with Hebbardsville Fire Department. The firefighters put out the fire and cleared the scene by about noon, Powell said.

Emergency Medical Service responded to the location, dressed the man's hand and recommended he see a doctor. Powell said the burn was not serious.

Bridge over Mississippi closed this week

Gleane staff

The U.S. 60/U.S. 62 bridge over the Mississippi River between Cairo, Ill., and southwestern Missouri will be closed to traffic for much of this week and will have one lane closed much of next week, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation. The bridge will be closed to traffic beginning at noon Monday through noon Thursday. The bridge will be restricted to one lane from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 1-4.

Motorists on U.S. 60/U.S. 62 needing to cross the Mississippi River in that area will need to detour north through Cairo on U.S. 51 and Illinois 3 to reach Interstate 57.

Airline Road parcel annexation on city meeting agenda

By Frank Boyett
270-831-8342

When the Henderson City Commission meets Tuesday it will consider beginning the process of annexing property on Airline Road into the city limits.

One of the parcels is just under 16 acres at 5741 Airline Road, where Beck's Superior Hybrids is developing a research and distribution facility, where a 52,000-square-foot building is being built. The commission will be asked to send the request to the Henderson City-County Planning Commission for a recommendation as to what zoning it should be once annexed.

Meanwhile, Beck's Hybrids is also asking the city to authorize extending sewer service to the property while the annexation question is pending.

The other annexation is for about 35 acres located between the Pennyrile Parkway, Garden Mile Road and Airline Road, which is owned by the Henderson County School District. That property "was inadvertently left out of a previous annexation," City Manager Russell Sights explained in a memo to the commission.

The city commission is also being asked to send the school property to the planning commission for a zoning recommendation.

The city commission meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the top-floor meeting room of the Henderson Municipal Center. Other items on the agenda include:

Development liaison: The commission will be asked to pass first reading of an ordinance amending the city's job classification and pay plan and its annual budget to reflect the proposed creation of a business development liaison in the Codes Division. (See related story on A1.)

Cable TV: The commission will consider hiring Lexington attorney Linda K. Ain to represent it in connection with the renewal of cable television franchises for Time Warner Cable and MediaCom. Her rate is $250 an hour and does not include out-of-pocket expenses.

HWU bonds: The commission will consider first reading of an ordinance authorizing issuance of nearly $10 million in bonds for the Henderson Water Utility to pay for its continued work improving its system. The commission will also consider a resolution hiring the law firm of Stoll-Keenon-Ogden for bond counsel services; J.J.B. Hilliard, W.L. Lyons LLC as financial advisers and the Bank of New York Mellon as paying agent in connection with the bonds.

Concrete repairs: The winning bidder on concrete repair of streets and sidewalks, Tompkins Hauling & Excavating, has withdrawn from the contract and the city commission is poised to award the bid to the second-lowest bidder. Hazex Construction Co. will receive $72,345, which is $1,485 more than what Tompkins originally bid.

WARM improvements: The commission will be asked to accept city maintenance responsibility for 505 feet of water main, two fire hydrants, and 143 feet of sewer main at the WARM Center at 50 McKinley St.

Appropriation amendment: The commission will be asked to make budget changes.

Briefs

Good Friday alters city trash schedule

There will be no city residential trash collection on Friday because the city of Henderson observes Good Friday.

The normal Friday routes will be collected with Thursday's collection. If you are normally scheduled for Friday collection, have your trash set out by 6 a.m. Thursday.

Also, the landfill/transfer station will be closed on Friday. It will reopen for normal operations at 7 a.m. Saturday.

The city's curbside recycling program will operate as usual this week.

City, county offices closed on Friday

Some government offices will be affected by Good Friday.

For instance, the city of Henderson takes the entire day off, which means there will be no city bus service from Henderson Area Rapid Transit on Friday.

Henderson County government offices will also be closed all day Friday.

There are exceptions, of course, for emergency services, which will operate as usual.

State government offices will take half a day off on Friday.

The Henderson County Public Library will be closed Easter Sunday.

Federal government offices and Henderson banking institutions will remain open on Good Friday.

Republican women's club revived here

The Henderson County Republican Women's Club has been revived by five women who are seeking others to join them, according to a press release.

New officers are President Cj Maple, who also serves on the board of directors of the Kentucky Federation of Republican Women's Clubs; Vice President Beverly Bailey; Secretary Mary Anne Bradley and Treasurer Gwen Boggess. Evelyn Disiena will serve as chairwoman of the Fundraising/Events Committee. New elections will take place in January of 2015.

Maple said males, as well as Republican women from Union and Webster counties, are welcome to join as associate members.

A meeting is planned at 6 p.m. April 4 in the basement meeting room of the Henderson County Public Library. Meetings are planned six times a year.

Dues are $30 annually; associate dues are $25.

Evansville Ballet staging 'Snow White' at HFAC April 27-28

The fairy tale ballet "Snow White" will be performed at the Henderson Fine Arts Center in April by Evansville Ballet Theatre.

The performance times for the ballet are 7 p.m. April 27 and 2 p.m. April 28.

Characters include Snow White, the wicked Queen and the Huntsmen. Guest artist Allen Abrams of Festival Ballet Theatre will join the cast of outstanding local dancers in the role of the Prince.

Reserved seating tickets start at $15, with a $3 discount for children 12 and under. Tickets are available for purchase Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. through the Henderson Fine Arts Center Box Office, 831-9800, or online at www.hendersonfac.com.

For more information on the performance, visit www.evansvilleballet.com or contact Evansville Ballet at 812.477.2080.

Camp Breckinridge quilt show April 4-6

Camp Breckinridge Museum & Arts Center in Morganfield has set its annual Quilt Show for April 4-6.

Organizers are expecting approximately 100 quilts for this year's show.

Those wishing to enter a quilt in the show can bring it to the museum, located at 116 N. Village Road, on April 1-3 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Another delivery time can be arranged by calling the museum at 270-389-4420.

The quilt show itself will take place from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. April 4-6. Admission is $5.

Vendors will be selling quilt supplies, scroll saw wood crafts, antiques, floral décor, laser wall quilts, personalized gifts and more. There will be door prizes, refreshment and a raffle for a "barn quilt."

Two special displays will be part of the show this year, including a quilt made by residents at Sturgis Rest Home. The second is a collection of quilts made by Mary Thomas Abell Sheffer.

Always Remember

By: Belinda Davis in honor of Gina

I hear your laugh in the wind,
I feel your tears in the rain,
I see your smile on a child's face,
I feel your touch in every hug,
I see your happiness in the rainbow,
I hear your anger in every storm,
I sense your pain in a baby's cry,
I remember, I will always remember,
In every wind, rain, child, hug,
rainbow, storm, and cry,
You will always be here,
I will always remember.

Some things just make you wonder

DAVID DIXON
EDITOR

Sometimes I sit and wonder. Sometimes I just sit. Lately I've been wondering:

■ Will University of Kentucky basketball fans grow weary of the one-and-done recruiting strategy our flagship university has been employing of late?

Another season like the one the Wildcats just wrapped up might push their fans over the edge. Highly ballyhooed athletes played with inconsistent effort and little spirit, certainly not the kind of Kentucky pride that fans themselves exhibit.

The strategy is a high reward, high risk proposition. Last year's national championship was the highest of rewards. This year's embarrassing flameout was at the other end of the scale.

There's always next year. Another batch of blue chip recruits are on the way, and it sounds like some of this year's one-and-doners might be changing their plans to two and done. That would help.

If a few leaders step forward and others get and keep their fires stoked, all will be forgiven.

■ I see where Ohio is expanding casino gambling, and Indiana is trying to find ways to combat the competition to its own casino industry. I wonder if Kentucky will ever get in the game.

A fancy new casino in downtown Cincinnati will draw even more entertainment dollars from northern Kentucky and elsewhere in the Bluegrass state. With a string of casinos along the Ohio River in southeastern Indiana, Kentuckians have all kinds of ways to spend their money in neighboring states where governments use the proceeds for the public good.

While all this competition is going on between our neighbors, the often discussed and cussed idea of a constitutional amendment to allow such gaming in Kentucky barely generated a whisper in the state legislature this session.

■ Speaking of the legislature I wonder if we'll have yet another special session called this year. We'll know after lawmakers reconvene Monday and Tuesday. Action to bail out the state's underfunded pension fund is still possible, but if past records hold true, nothing will get done and the governor will have to call legislators back to Frankfort to finish the job — at a cost of tens of thousands of dollars a day.

A reader has been wondering about the same thing. He also wonders if any legislator would step up and file a bill along these lines: When lawmakers leave their work unfinished and a special session is necessary, they work for free. I'm not holding my breath, and I'm sure this reader isn't either.

■ Doing something about gridlock in the Kentucky legislature is about like doing something about the weather. It's one extreme or the other. We can never get it right. Now I'm wondering whatever happened to early spring.

How crazy is our weather? As I write this late last week, the previous five high daily temperatures were 34, 38, 46, 48 and 39. I looked up the same five dates from last year. The daily highs were 82, 82, 82, 82 and 81.

Give me a break! No wonder half the people I know are walking around with head colds or worse.

Things have gotten so bad there's a move afoot to kill the messenger.

You might have seen the story about an Ohio prosecutor "indicting" Punxawhat'shisname Phil, the weather-predicting groundhog, for the "misrepresentation of spring." Sly old Phil had us looking forward to an early spring when he didn't see his shadow back in February.

If I was Phil I'd crawl back deep in my hole and stay there. The humans have an epidemic of severe cabin fever, and they're looking for a scape-rodent.

Journalism not always held in esteem

RON JENKINS
COLUMNIST

"When are you going to write something that ridicules journalists?"

That's how one reader-friend reacted to last week's column, a collection of "Famous Political Quotes" about politics and politicians.

Actually, not all of those reprinted quotes "ridiculed" politics and/or politicians, though the majority of them were not real kind.

Before honoring my friend's request to be, well, "fair and balanced," I should point out that I am serving merely as a messenger; I do not necessarily agree with the quotes from last week or those which follow.

Having cleared that up, here are some of the quotes — many from long, long ago — that I plucked from a number of sources on the Internet by searching for "famous journalism quotes." And, as you will note, not all of them ridicule journalism.

Here goes:

■ "We journalists make it a point to know very little about an extremely wide variety of topics; this is how we stay objective." — Dave Barry.

■ "Journalism largely consists of saying 'Lord Jones is Dead" to people who never knew that Lord Jones was alive." — G.K. Chesterton (1874-1936).

■ "I hope we never live to see the day when a thing is as bad as some of our newspapers make it." — Will Rogers.

■ "Journalism is literature in a hurry." — Matthew Arnold.

■ " Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter." — Thomas Jefferson.

■ "If a person is not talented enough to be a novelist, not smart enough to be a lawyer, and his hands are too shaky to perform operations, he becomes a journalist." — Norman Mailer.

■ "I think I know what military fame is: to be killed on the field of battle and have your name misspelled in the newspapers." — William T. Sherman.

■ "I believe in equality for everyone, except reporters and photographers." — Mahatma Gandhi.

■ "You're miserable, edgy and tired. You're in a perfect mood for journalism." — Warren Ellis.

■ "So much for Objective Journalism. Don't bother to look for it here — not under any byline of mine; or anyone else that I can think of. With the possible exception of things like box scores, race results, and stock market tabulations, there is no such thing as Objective Journalism. The phrase itself is a contradiction." — Hunter S. Thompson, from "Fear and Loathing on the Campaign Trail '72."

■ "There can be no higher law in journalism than to tell the truth and to shame the devil." — Walter Lippmann.

■ "I don't think a tough question is disrespectful." — Helen Thomas.

■ "Better a good journalist than a poor assassin." — Jean-Paul Sartre.

■ "The public have an insatiable curiosity to know everything. Except what is worth knowing. Journalism, conscious of this, and having tradesman-like habits, supplies their demands." — Oscar Wilde.

And one of my favorites of all time:

■ "Our liberty depends on freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost." — Thomas Jefferson.

Curiously, in my scanning of the Internet for comments about journalists/journalism, I found Jefferson to be very, let's say, "wide-ranging," in his views on the subject.

An example: "The man who reads nothing at all is better educated than the man who reads nothing but newspapers."

Stay tuned.

Common foes making for strange bedfellows

ANN McFEATTERS
COLUMNIST

Love and loathing in Washington have become the norm. The strange combinations that are forming to try to forge policy defy conventional wisdom.

The most noticeable duo is Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and sidekick Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C. The 76-year-old Vietnam War POW, 76, and the 57-year-old reservist in the South Carolina Air National Guard have joined forces time and again to voice their distrust of President Barack Obama, buck his nominees and attack his policies.

The two former mavericks, once known for working with Democrats, have formed a "bromance" to further their agenda to convince Americans Obama is at sea on foreign policy. Graham most recently said former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, currently the most popular politician in America, "got away with murder" when Americans were killed by terrorists in Benghazi, Libya.

But both McCain and Graham are transparent in their desperate efforts to try to convince conservative Tea Party-movement proponents that they should be re-elected. McCain is getting increasingly conservative challenges in his primary races; Graham faces a near-certain Tea Party challenge next year.

But then, McCain and Graham turned around and attacked big Tea Party honcho Sen. Rand Paul, the Kentucky libertarian, for suggesting that America kills Americans on American soil with drones. The White House strongly denied that.

Paul, who probably is running for president in 2016, won the "straw poll" at the Conservative Political Action Committee's recent get-together. Does that mean Paul has a chance to be president? No. He might get the nomination, but he could not win a general election.

CPAC wants to reward those it likes, who prattle the conservative line no matter what else is happening. CPAC did not even invite two of the most popular conservative Republican governors — New Jersey's Chris Christie, who committed the cardinal sin of praising Obama for helping his state deal with Hurricane Sandy; and Virginia's Bob McDonnell, who backed a tax-raising transportation bill the Tea Party loathed.

The GOP's internecine warfare is raging out in the open. McCain's 2008 running mate, Sarah Palin, who quit her job as governor of Alaska, and political strategist Karl Rove, the architect of George W. Bush's two White House takeovers, can't stand each other. They regularly trade barbs on whether goofy candidates should be the party's standard-bearers.

Meanwhile, Vice President Joe Biden has a new best friend, Michael Bloomberg, the maverick mayor of New York. Both are trying to get a sensible gun-control policy past Congress, which keeps refusing because Congress is in thrall to the National Rifle Association.

The NRA continues to want more people to buy guns and notes that if you're not with the NRA in arguing against more controls on gun and ammunition sales, then you're against the NRA. Bloomberg and Biden are nothing if not totally passionate about their zeal in reducing gun violence, no matter how maddening the opposition.

Now Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Obama, two men who reportedly can't stand each other (Netanyahu openly rooted for Mitt Romney to beat Obama last year), are walking arm in arm, literally and figuratively, because of their common enemies in Iran and Syria. Yet peace seems as elusive as ever.

Ohio Sen. Rob Portman, who was considered by Romney as a running mate in 2012 to help uphold his conservative social agenda, stunned fellow Republicans by saying that knowing his son is gay has convinced him that same-sex marriage should be a civil right. Fifty-eight percent of Americans agree with him. Nonetheless, Portman is under pressure from conservatives who don't want him to spearhead a campaign for civil marriage.

We're not even going to mention U.S. athlete Dennis Rodman's surrealistic pilgrimage to North Korea to embrace its murdering dictator.

Politics has always produced strange bedfellows. The system just seems a little more bizarre these days. Perhaps actress Ashley Judd will run in Kentucky against Senate GOP leader Mitch McConnell, making it even more entertaining and confusing.

Henderson's 1913 flood fourth worst in history

FRANK BOYETT
COLUMNIST

The flood of 1913 was one of the worst locally and, except for the ones of 1883 and 1884, was the biggest recorded prior to 1937.

Henderson residents began to get a taste of it as a torrential downpour began 100 years ago today, "sending the creeks on a rampage, washing away numerous culverts and bridges" as well as overflowing sewers and making travel impassable in many parts of the county, The Gleaner reported March 26, 1913.

Farmers in the river bottoms began moving to higher ground, the next day's paper said, "profiting from the severe lesson taught them by the January flood," which turned out to be much less severe.

The March 27 issue said the flood stage had reached 33 feet — but worse was yet to come. "Old rivermen at various points along the Ohio say that the greatest flood in the Ohio's history is coming and telegraphic reports from the upper Ohio valley seem to bear out their predictions."

The river gauge here was up to 41.5 feet, the March 29 issue reported, noting the river had come up nearly 4 feet the previous day.

The Alzey area, particularly that section called Walnut Bottoms, had been particularly hard-hit by the flood that January, with Henderson residents providing much aid to the refugees there, and the spring 1913 flood proved a knockout blow to families who had not yet recovered.

Mrs. Jim Shehan gave birth as the floodwaters were pounding at her door, and as they continued to rise she and her baby had to be rescued by boat. "Her condition is critical," the April 3 edition said.

The flood crested at Evansville April 5 at 48.4 feet, which makes it the fourth-worst in recorded history. The big bad one was the 1937 flood, of course, which topped out at 53.8 feet, followed by 48.8 feet in 1884 and 48.6 feet in 1883.

There was much argument back in 1913 whether the 1884 watermark had been exceeded in 1913. The April 5 issue carried an article about that debate, and seemed to conclusively prove that 1884 had not been exceeded.

Grocer and civil engineer Joe W. Allen noted the 1884 flood reached the basement door sill into the Clark tobacco factory. County Road Engineer S.H. Kimmel surveyed a line from that point to the river gauge at Third Street and determined "had this present gauge been in existence in 1884 (it) would have made the high water at that time register 48.7 feet," which is just a hair off the official Evansville mark of 48.8 feet in 1884. That article also gave 27 flood stages here going back to 1832, which came from the diary of Marion Duncan.

A number of close calls were recounted in The Gleaner, most of them from the Walnut Bottoms area. John McFerron, J. Gardner, John Crawford and Gilbert Hollifield had been living on the second floor of Hollifield's house with water up to their knees.

They were eating dinner and discussing whether it was time to head for higher ground when the house gave a lurch and began to slide off its foundation. The men scrambled out a window into a skiff just moments before the house "fell with a roar into the water."

But most of the human stories were of grueling hardship and hunger as opposed to the sharp edge of danger.

"Two hundred and fifty penniless, scantily clothed, chilled and hungry men, women and children, driven from their homes in Walnut Bottoms by the relentless yellow floodwaters are living in and around Smith Mills," The Gleaner's story of April 5 began. They were living two or three families to a house or, even worse, in barns, tobacco factories or "anywhere else they can find a place to lay their wearied bodies.

"The store owners at Smith Mills have been aiding the hungry people, none of whom have any money — and have had none since the last flood."

One of those merchants, Hayden Ogden, told The Gleaner that people were crowded 15 or 20 to two-room houses, and that 11 were in one room above the Odd Fellows Hall.

"They are dependent upon the stores here for what they eat and we extend credit to many we can never get a cent from," Ogden said. "They trade us anything they have for food. In many instances we have given groceries away.

"They are sleeping on straw, have no covers, are ragged, have no change of clothing, (but) are bearing up under their losses with remarkable stoicism."

Smith Mills residents began petitioning for help from the governor for tents and the U.S. Army for food, which was quickly forthcoming. The army initially sent 1,680 pounds of flour, 13 boxes of canned beef, and 100 pounds each of coffee and sugar.

The suffering wasn't limited to the Alzey river bottoms, of course. Henry and Mattie Schnelle's family of seven had been living across from Henderson in the attic of their house for five days, largely without food, until rescuers chopped a hole in the roof to free them.

And residents of the Reed area were also hurting. "Six families are camped in one barn and in desperate circumstances," said an April 6 story, which noted aid for that area was mostly coming by boat from Owensboro.

The Pittsburgh Coal and Coke Co. mine at Spottsville was flooded when water entered an abandoned air shaft and it looked as though it would never reopen, The Gleaner reported April 6. The April 10 issue said 200 were starving at Spottsville.

Henderson also was not left untouched. Large quantities of mud in the floodwaters gummed up the works of the boiler for the city's power plant, which shut down electricity to streetlights and streetcars until repairs could be made.

Meanwhile, back at Smith Mills the flood refugees came straggling in to get their share of the food, according to the April 8 issue. They numbered 256 and aroused "deep sympathy" as lined up in front of Clyde Grady's drugstore.

75 YEARS AGO

The Kentucky Theater was running a two-reel comedy that featured nearly 50 local residents in a "Henderson-made quickie" that had been filmed several weeks previously by Melton Barker of Hollywood, The Gleaner reported March 29, 1938.

The story listed by name each of the local cast members — but failed to give the name of the movie, which apparently was "The Kidnappers Foil."

50 YEARS AGO

Members of the Henderson Amateur Radio Club observed "Old Timers Night" by honoring those locals who had been active in ham radio during the period 1926-35, according to The Gleaner of March 28, 1963.

25 YEARS AGO

The city commission took the advice of the Downtown Henderson Project to allow unlimited free parking on Saturdays, The Gleaner reported March 23, 1988.

U.S., Afghans approve jail transfer

By Lolita C. Baldor
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – The U.S. has reached an agreement with the Afghanistan government to transfer the Parwan Detention Facility to Afghan control, the Pentagon said Saturday, two weeks after negotiations broke down over whether the U.S. would have the power to block the release of some detainees.

According to a senior U.S. official, a key element to the agreement is that the Afghans can invoke a procedure that insures prisoners considered dangerous would not be released from the detention center. The agreement also includes a provision that allows the two sides to work together to resolve differences.

Transfer of the Parwan detention center Monday is critical to the ongoing effort to gradually shift control of the country's security to the Afghans as the U.S. and allies move toward the full withdrawal of combat troops by the end of 2014.

Afghans demanded control of the center, but U.S. officials have worried that the most threatening detainees would be freed once the U.S. transferred control. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel spoke with Afghan President Hamid Karzai Saturday as officials finalized the agreement after days of intense negotiations.

The senior official said U.S. and Afghan officials who are familiar with the detainees would meet to assess the potential danger of their release to coalition forces. The official said that more senior level officials could be brought in if there are disagreements but that to date the two sides have been able to agree without bringing in those higher authorities.

Disagreements over the detention facility, which also included whether Afghans can be held without trial, had thrown a pall over the ongoing negotiations for a bilateral security agreement that would govern the presence of U.S. forces in Afghanistan after 2014.

The Parwan prison has an Afghan administrator, but the Americans have power to veto the release of detainees.

Pentagon press secretary George Little said Hagel "welcomed President Karzai's commitment that the transfer will be carried out in a way that ensures the safety of the Afghan people and coalition forces by keeping dangerous individuals detained in a secure and humane manner in accordance with Afghan law."

Mom ID's suspect in baby shooting

By Russ Bynum
Associated Press

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A makeshift memorial sits on a street corner in Brunswick, Ga., near the shooting scene.

BRUNSWICK, Ga. – The mother of a baby shot dead in his stroller took one look at a teenage suspect's jailhouse mug shot Saturday and said he definitely was the killer. Yet an aunt of the teen said he was eating breakfast with her when the slaying took place.

Despite the conflicting stories, police have charged 17-year-old De'Marquise Elkins with murder, along with a 14-year-old suspect whose name has been withheld because he's a juvenile.

Brunswick police spokesman Todd Rhodes said even though Elkins' aunt provided an alibi, authorities have good reason to bring the charges.

"That's what she's saying, but the evidence we're looking at says something else," Rhodes said, though he would not elaborate.

Also Saturday, police in this coastal port city released 911 recordings from neighbors who sobbed and pleaded for help right after 13-month-old Antonio Santiago was shot in the head a few blocks from his mother's apartment.

Sherry West said she was pushing her baby in his stroller as she walked home from the post office Thursday morning. She said a teenager, with a younger boy behind him, approached and asked her for money. West said when she told him she had no money, the teen drew a gun and said: "Do you want me to kill your baby?"

The gunman opened fire, and West was shot in the leg, while another bullet grazed her left ear, she said. She watched helplessly as the gunman shot her son in the face, she said.

MISSOURI

Snowstorm blasts Plains, Midwest

KANSAS CITY – An early spring snowstorm forced the cancellation of more than 100 flights at Denver International Airport and closed several roads Saturday as it moved eastward, dumping more than a foot of snow in some places.

The snow started falling around midnight in northeast Colorado and moved into northwest Kansas and southwest Nebraska.

Ten to 15 inches of snowfall had fallen by late Saturday morning north of Interstate 70 in northwest Kansas and northeast Colorado, with an additional 3 inches expected in the area, said Jerry Killingsworth, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service. The interstate had been shut down Saturday from Denver to Colby, Kan., because of poor visibility. The northbound lanes of Interstate 25 also were closed south of Fort Collins, Colo., because of multiple accidents.

Denver International Airport spokesman Heath Montgomery Heath Montgomery said about 106 flights have been canceled, many of which involved commuter jets headed to nearby destinations or to mountain towns.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Prison staffers' furloughs averted

WASHINGTON – Attorney General Eric Holder says he has averted daily furloughs of 3,570 federal prison staffers around the country, moving $150 million from other Justice Department accounts to stave off a serious threat to the safety of correctional staff, inmates and the public.

Some 38,000 employees at the U.S. Bureau of Prisons supervise 176,000 inmates at 119 institutions, ensuring security and providing prisoners with needed programs.

Holder's memo did not say which department agencies were tapped for the $150 million, and spokeswoman Nanda Chitre declined to comment on that question Saturday.

MICHIGAN

Deadline given for farm animal removal

WILLIAMSTON TOWNSHIP – A Michigan family has less than a week to get rid of goats, chickens, pot belly pigs and rabbits from their property or face a lawsuit.

Jeremiah and Jessica Hudson of Williamston Township near Lansing have until Friday to comply with the order, township attorney Gary Bender said.

The couple and their five children, ages 2 to 11, moved from Lansing last year to keep farm animals. They said they moved because her children have food allergies and they wanted access to goat milk and affordable eggs.

But one of their new neighbors complained. The Williamston Township board voted this month to take legal action to force the removal of the animals from Jessica Hudson's 1.5-acre Sweet Peas Farm. The board cited a local ordinance that prohibits farm animals in an area zoned for single-family homes.

However, Jessica Hudson said she is not giving up the animals and that the family is protected under the federal Right to Farm Act.

"I guess I have to take them to court for them to listen," she said of township officials.

Warlord's death gives French hope

PARIS – The death of a top al-Qaida-linked warlord in combat with French-led troops represents a victory in the battle against jihadists who had a stranglehold on northern Mali. But it is far from the defining blow against a wily enemy that can go underground and regroup to renew itself.

Even the fearsome Abou Zeid is replaceable.

A top commander of al-Qaida in the Islamic Maghreb, Abou Zeid had been in the cross hairs of the French military and their African partners since they moved in to Mali on Jan. 11 to rout radicals seen as a threat to northwest Africa and to Europe.

PAKISTAN

Musharraf says he doesn't fear arrest

KARACHI – Former Pakistani president Pervez Musharraf said he doesn't fear arrest despite facing criminal charges as he vowed Saturday to return to his homeland and contest upcoming elections after more than four years in exile.

But legal problems are only one challenge facing Musharraf as the Taliban warned they have an assassination team ready to kill the one-time military strongman if he sets foot in the country on Sunday as promised.

Musharraf announced in early March that he would return to Pakistan to take part in upcoming elections, despite allegations he was part of a conspiracy to assassinate ex-premier Benazir Bhutto, militant threats to his safety and a waning popularity. The deposed general said he would lead his party in elections scheduled for May 11.

EGYPT

Political groups toss barbs over violence

CAIRO – Egypt's political groups blamed one another Saturday for one of the year's worst bouts of violence between supporters and opponents of the president's Muslim Brotherhood group.

The powerful Brotherhood said it holds the opposition partly responsible for giving "political cover" to "thugs" who attacked and beat hundreds of the group's members outside its Cairo headquarters.

Opposition groups said President Mohammed Morsi is to blame. They accuse Morsi of polarizing the country and of failing to provide stability nine months after being elected in the country's first free presidential race.

Egypt is reeling from a number of crises, including a diesel shortage that has crippled life for millions, an economic downturn, widespread poverty and a lack of security.

LEBANON

Temporary stay sought of premier

BEIRUT — Lebanon's president Saturday asked the outgoing prime minister to stay on in a caretaking role, opening the way for what is expected to be prolonged political jockeying as parliamentary blocs try to build a majority coalition to form a new government.

Prime Minister Najib Mikati's abrupt departure has plunged the nation into uncertainty amid heightened sectarian tensions and clashes related to the civil war in Syria.

Self-exiled Russian tycoon Berezovsky found dead at 67

By Cassandra Vinograd
Associated Press

LONDON – Boris Berezovsky, a self-exiled and outspoken Russian tycoon who had a bitter falling out with Russian President Vladimir Putin, was found dead in southeast England. He was 67.

In recent years, the former Kremlin power-broker-turned-thorn in Putin's side fended off attacks on his character and on his fortune — sometimes successfully, sometimes not — in cases that often bore political undertones.

Thames Valley police said Berezovsky's death was being treated as unexplained. They would not identify him, but when asked about him by name, they read a statement saying they were investigating the death of a 67-year-old man at a property in Ascot, a town 25 miles west of London.

A mathematician-turned-Mercedes dealer, Berezovsky amassed his wealth during Russia's chaotic privatization of state assets in the early 1990s. For backing former President Boris Yeltsin, he gained political clout and opportunities to buy state assets at knockdown prices, making a fortune in oil and automobiles.

He also played a key role in the rise of Yeltsin's successor, Vladimir Putin, but later fell out of favor and fled to Britain to seek political asylum in the early 2000s.

Berezovsky was one of several so-called Russian "oligarchs" to butt heads with Putin.

After coming into power, the Russian president effectively made a pact: the oligarchs could keep their money if they didn't challenge him politically. Those who refused found themselves in dire circumstances. Some were imprisoned — like former Yukos Oil chief Mikhail Khodorkovsky — while others, like Berezovsky, fled.

Assets of these pariah businessmen were acquired by state corporations or cooperative tycoons, often at bargain prices.

In the U.K., Berezovsky allied himself with an array of prominent Kremlin critics. Among them was ex-KGB agent Alexander Litvinenko, who fled Russia with Berezovsky's help after accusing officials there of plotting to assassinate political opponents.

Litvinenko died Nov. 26, 2006, after drinking tea laced with a lethal dose of the rare radioactive isotope polonium-210 in a London hotel. From his deathbed, Litvinenko accused the Kremlin of orchestrating his poisoning, and British police named former KGB agent Andrei Lugovoi as the prime suspect.

Militants raise fear in Syria, Israel

By Zeina Karam
Associated Press

BEIRUT – Syrian regime forces routed rebels in fighting on the edge of the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights last week, leaving at least 35 dead, activists said Saturday, as the country's civil war reached the doorstep of the strategic plateau.

The rebel effort to overrun the Quneitra region along the cease-fire line separating Syria and Israel has heightened worries that Islamic extremists among those fighting President Bashar Assad could take over the front line with Israeli troops and gain a potential staging ground for attacks on the Jewish state.

The frontier has largely been calm in the nearly four decades since the two countries fought a war over the Golan Heights that ended with a U.N.-monitored cease-fire.

But Israeli military officials have expressed concern that a rebel takeover could upset the calm maintained by Assad and his predecessor and father the late Hafez Assad.

Those fears have been compounded by increasing influence wielded by extremist groups over the divided rebels and the increasing international isolation of the regime.

"We are seeing terror organizations gaining footholds increasingly in the territory," said Lt. Gen. Benny Gantz, Israel's military chief at a conference in Israel last week.

Israel says it is trying to stay out of Syria's civil war.

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Palm Sunday, March 24, the 83rd day of 2013. There are 282 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 24, 1913, New York's Palace Theatre, the legendary home of vaudeville, opened on Broadway.

On this date:

In 1765, Britain enacted the Quartering Act, requiring American colonists to provide temporary housing to British soldiers.

In 1832, a mob in Hiram, Ohio, attacked, tarred and feathered Mormon leaders Joseph Smith Jr. and Sidney Rigdon.

In 1882, German scientist Robert Koch (kohk) announced in Berlin that he had discovered the bacillus responsible for tuberculosis.

In 1934, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill granting future independence to the Philippines.

In 1944, in occupied Rome, the Nazis executed more than 300 civilians in reprisal for an attack by Italian partisans the day before that had killed 32 German soldiers.

In 1958, rock-and-roll singer Elvis Presley was inducted into the Army in Memphis, Tenn.

In 1976, the president of Argentina, Isabel Peron, was deposed by her country's military.

In 1980, one of El Salvador's most respected Roman Catholic Church leaders, Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, was shot to death by a sniper as he celebrated Mass in San Salvador.

In 1988, former national security aides Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter and businessmen Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim pleaded not guilty to charges stemming from the Iran-Contra affair. (North and Poindexter were convicted, but had their verdicts thrown out; Secord and Hakim received probation after each pleaded guilty to a single count under a plea bargain.)

In 1989, the supertanker Exxon Valdez (vahl-DEEZ') ran aground on a reef in Alaska's Prince William Sound and began leaking 11 million gallons of crude oil.

In 1993, Ezer Weizman (AY'-zur WYTZ'-mahn) was elected Israel's seventh president.

In 1998, two students, ages 13 and 11, opened fire outside Jonesboro Westside Middle School in Arkansas, killing four classmates and a teacher. (Mitchell Johnson and Andrew Golden were imprisoned by Arkansas until age 18, then by federal authorities until age 21. However, Johnson has since been returned to prison on unrelated charges.)

Ten years ago: Iraqi state television showed two men said to have been the U.S. crew of an Apache helicopter forced down during heavy fighting in central Iraq. (Chief Warrant Officer David S. Williams and Chief Warrant Officer Ronald D. Young Jr. spent three weeks in captivity before they were released along with five other POWs.)

THINK ABOUT IT

"Man must cease attributing his problems to his environment, and learn again to exercise his will — his personal responsibility in the realm of faith and morals." — Albert Schweitzer, German-born missionary and Nobel laureate (1875-1965).

Listings sought for upcoming Progress edition

The Gleaner is seeking information about local support and education groups with a health and wellness mission for our upcoming Progress edition.

Our goal is to create a directory that could point our readers to groups that have something to offer regarding a particular health issue.

Please send the name of the group, purpose of the group, meeting date/time and a contact phone number, email address, website address or Facebook page name to: Features@TheGleaner.com by email or fax to 827-2765.

Salvation Army receives Toyota grant

Gleaner staff

The Salvation Army in Henderson has received a $2,000 grant for its food pantry from the Toyota Motor Manufacturing vehicle assembly plant in Princeton, Ind., the company announced.

"Youth and education continues to be our top priority, but our Philanthropy Committee also understands other critical needs in the community," said Kelly Dillon, Toyota Indiana spokeswoman. "For example, The Salvation Army in Henderson was awarded a grant this quarter to support its food pantry, which was critically low on canned foods."

The Toyota Philanthropy Committee, which is made up of team members from different areas of the plant, reviews grant applications and selects programs for funding on a quarterly basis.

Toyota's grants are given to nonprofit organizations in the counties where the majority of its 4,500 team members reside. The plant employs approximately 300 Kentucky residents.

Counties represented this quarter were Edwards and Wabash counties in Illinois, Henderson County in Kentucky and Dubois, Gibson, Knox, Pike, Vanderburgh and Warrick counties in Indiana.

The deadline for Toyota Indiana's next grant application is May 15. To apply, visit www.toyota.com/tma/about/community/orgForm.do?tmmi.

South PASS students help with 'Chemo Buddies'

Gleaner staff

South Middle School students in the Positive Approach for Student Success program were inspired to help people in need after watching "Pay It Forward" in class.

The PASS students chose to help an organization called "Chemo Buddies," which focuses on newly diagnosed chemo therapy patients with personalized gift bags to encourage them along their journey, according to a news release.

The student group raised $100 in donations thanks to the "Circle of Friends" at Chapel Hill Church.

PASS then used the donation funds to shop for personal items, such as toiletries and personal decorations to put in the bags.

"Since Nancy Swanson herself has been through two rounds of cancer and chemo, she understands how important what the kids are doing is," said Jamie Like, district social worker for Henderson County Schools, " and they understand how important it is to the people they are helping."

Swanson is a South teacher and the PASS coach.

By a razor-thin margin, Dems get budget passed

But differences with House GOP plan may extend gridlock

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An exhausted Senate gave predawn approval Saturday to a Democratic $3.7 trillion budget for next year that embraces nearly $1 trillion in tax increases over the coming decade but shelters domestic programs targeted for cuts by House Republicans.

While their victory was by a razor-thin 50-49 vote, it allowed Democrats to tout their priorities. Yet it doesn't resolve the deep differences the two parties have over deficits and the size of government.

Joining all Republicans voting no were four Democrats who face re-election next year in potentially difficult races: Sens. Max Baucus of Montana, Mark Begich of Alaska, Kay Hagan of North Carolina and Mark Pryor of Arkansas. Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., did not vote.

While calling on both sides to find common ground, Carney did not hold out much hope for compromise with Republicans. The rival budget passed by the GOP-led House cuts social programs too deeply, he said, and fails "to ask for a single dime of deficit reduction from closing tax loopholes for the wealthy and well-connected."

The Senate vote came after lawmakers labored through the night on scores of symbolic amendments, ranging from voicing support for letting states collect taxes on Internet sales to expressing opposition to requiring photo IDs for voters.

Final approval came at around 5 a.m. EDT, capping an extraordinary 20 hours of votes and debate. As the night wore on, virtually all senators remained in the chamber, a rarity during a normal business day. But at that hour, most had nowhere else to go.

The Senate's budget would shrink annual federal shortfalls over the next decade to nearly $400 billion, raise unspecified taxes by $975 billion and cull modest savings from domestic programs.

In contrast, a rival budget approved by the GOP-run House balances the budget within 10 years without boosting taxes.

That blueprint— by House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis., his party's vice presidential candidate last year — claims $4 trillion more in savings over the period than Senate Democrats by digging deeply into Medicaid, food stamps and other safety net programs for the needy. It would also transform the Medicare health care program for seniors into a voucher-like system for future recipients.

The long debate got testy at times.

As the clock ticked past 1 a.m., Sen. Murray, D-Wash., asked senators to show respect for colleagues "who may not be able to stand as long as us, or who are elderly." Sen. David Vitter, R-La., shot back that Republicans were not trying to delay anything, and wondered what flights or other appointments would be missed if senators voted until 7 a.m.

he says, boasts more activities than some much larger programs in the area and "has the longest-running Senior Games program in the state of Kentucky."

On Bingo days, the parking lot is chock full by 9:30 a.m. and the regular center dances draw impressive numbers of folks who are still light on their feet and young at heart.

Judy, Steve's bride of 46 years, says her husband's positive outlook on life and keen sense of humor are helping them both through his diagnosis — confirmed earlier this month at Vanderbilt — of ALS.

ALS is a little name for a big disease that gradually takes away muscle control for movement, speech, eating and breathing.

The National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Stroke relates that most ALS patients die from respiratory failure, usually within three to five years. However, about 10 percent survive for 10 or more years.

Steve, who has incredible support from his wife, his children Stephanie and Stephen, his four grandchildren and other family and friends plus Gathering Place members and former students is keeping an upbeat attitude and you can bet he's shooting for that "10 or more years" scenario.

ALS, which stands for Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, is more widely known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, for the famous baseball player who was diagnosed with it in 1939.

The disease has no known cause or cure, and worldwide there are one to three people per 100,000 with it.

It most often occurs in people 40 to 60 years of age, and strikes more males than females.

Symptoms vary, but in Steve's case it was a weakness in his legs that he at first attributed to arthritis.

On a trout fishing trip to Arkansas with some of his center pals last summer, he had difficulty climbing in and out of the boat.

In mid-September, he had surgery for a broken ankle and a few weeks later was deer hunting when he fell "and couldn't get off the ground. I had to pull myself up with branches."

An MRI showed no explanation for the problems, but he started falling from time to time at his and Judy's home near the Ohio River, and his neurologist began to suspect ALS.

When I visited with the couple last week, Steve's walker was parked by his recliner. "That's my best friend," he joked. He gets along without a wheelchair at home, but feels he couldn't fulfill his responsibilities at the Gathering Place without it.

He's given up driving, because he fears his response time in critical situations might be compromised.

Judy, a retired Methodist Hospital RN, says Steve "pushes himself" and is determined to do as much as he can for as long as he can.

They met at the old log pavilion at Atkinson Park when they were teens, and have been a couple since that time. That youth facility which burned years ago was located on the site of what is now the Gathering Place.

In the years between the pavilion and the senior center, Steve got his education and taught at schools in Union County early in his career and then settled among Henderson County schools, where he served as principal over the years at Corydon Elementary, Hebbardsville Elementary, and East Heights. He also was assistant principal at North Middle School.

On the first day of each school year, he advised students, "As of today, each of you has an 'A'." Stressing the importance of knowing children and their abilities individually, he tried to help them excel.

When he began seeing the grandchildren of his original students, he figured it was time to move on.

The longtime volunteer for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife is fully aware of the seriousness of his condition and acknowledges he never thought he'd find himself with such limitations.

But he quickly adds, "You take it one day at a time and take whatever the good Lord gives you that day, and go on. Every day is a gift."

winds will be blowing out of the northwest. The winds are expected to produce gusts up to 30-35 mph, so it should feel much colder than the actual temperature.

"Basically what it means is it's going to be a miserable commute Monday morning," he said.

The snowfall should continue until about 7 p.m. Monday. There is a slight chance for snow flurries until Tuesday morning, but no accumulation.

rain gauge near Graham Hill east of Henderson has measured 2.85 inches, while a Mesonet gauge at Morganfield recorded 3.18 inches.

"This has just added to our already wet winter season where Kentucky was 2.57 inches above normal over the course of December and January," Dixon said. "The wet pattern looks to continue this upcoming weekend and on into April. The five-day rainfall outlook through early next week is predicting anywhere from another half to 1 inch falling across the area. The latest one-month outlook for April is also suggesting above normal precipitation. This is in addition to above normal precipitation expected the next three months into June."

Priddy summarized based on the current outlooks, the upcoming planting season looks to resemble years in the recent past.

"In typical Ohio Valley fashion, the weather pattern will throw another curveball at the planting season," he said. "While well below-normal temperatures and wet conditions will continue to postpone field operations through the end of March, we will get a warm-up going into early April and 'spring' will finally arrive."

has considerable expertise with the city-county geographic information system; one of her new duties, if approved, would be to create and maintain GIS layers as they relate to development.

"Part of it is understanding why you have a particular regulation; it's usually there for a reason," Sights said. The goal is to maintain the public protection the regulation was designed to provide, yet allow the developer to smoothly move forward with the project.

"This key point person will help people do that. That's going to be their priority work as far as the things they do in the city."

But Sights noted that the liaison work will not be a full-time job; in fact, it's estimated at 35 percent of the job. Richey would retain many of her current duties.

Originally, he said, some thought was given to bringing in someone from outside "who was new and fresh to government," but the downside to that is that it could take them a while to get familiar "with all the government issues we deal with on a daily basis.

That's one of the reasons he's recommending the job come from inside the Codes Division, because the codes office and the Henderson City-County Planning Commission is "where most things start."

The liaison will be authorized to go outside the boundaries of city government, Sights said. If a question or an issue comes up with the city water or electric utilities or some other outside agency, "that liaison will go with the person ... to get it worked out. They won't just send them down there.

"We want that person to be available to get the rocks out of the road, whatever they are," whether the issue be a business license, a utility connection, tap fees or whatever. "Helping is the whole idea behind the position — to go with them rather than send them."

HUNT

the Easter egg hunt all week, asking her dad each day if it was finally time.

"We came around the curve down there and she saw all the cars and was like, 'Yes, Easter eggs!" Justice said.

Nolan Carrier found at least 30 Easter eggs. Carrier came to the park with his father, William Carrier, and grandma Vickie Honaker.

The 9-year-old boy said the best part was "going out and trying to find the eggs."

Five-year-old Katie Kerr, 5, was still excited about her haul of pastel eggs as she helped her aunt Dina Bowling and 5-year-old cousin Lauren Bowling sort candy out on a picnic table under a shelter.

"This is great!" said Kerr.

The weather for the Easter egg hunt was a bit chilly, but Simmons said he was glad it was sunny and snowflake free. Once the kids concluded their Easter egg hunt, the adults had their own bit of fun collecting 1,000 Easter eggs that included a golden one that signified the finder won a $25 gift certificate from the Downtown Henderson Partnership.

The adults were just as excited as their children to begin.

"They say they are adults, but they are just big kids," Simmons said.

Cards steamroll Rams

Louisville marches on with 82-56 NCAA victory

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

LEXINGTON – Watching film of Louisville demolishing Colorado State is going to be scary enough for anyone who has to face the Cardinals over the next two weeks.

Hearing what coach Rick Pitino said afterward is going to be downright terrifying.

"We can play much better," Pitino said. "This is the best we have played so far at both ends of the floor. ... But we can definitely get better and improve."

It's tough to see how.

Russ Smith scored 27 on 7-of-15 shooting, three other Cardinals reached double figures and top-seeded Louisville put on a defensive clinic in dismantling Colorado State 82-56 on Saturday.

Louisville forced the eighth-seeded Rams into a season-high 20 turnovers and outrebounded Colorado State 29-24 — no small thing considering the Rams came in with a nation-best plus-12 margin. Colton Iverson and Pierce Hornung, the country's best rebounding tandem, managed just eight. Greg Smith led the Rams (26-9) with 14 points while Dorian Green, who'd scored 26 against Missouri, was held to just six on 2-of-13 shooting.

"I don't want to put the pressure on Rick and his guys, but they're special," Colorado State coach Larry Eustachy said. "They need a little luck like everybody does to win it all, but that's as impressive team as I've been against, certainly."

Louisville (31-5) will play Oregon on Friday in Indianapolis. The Cardinals have won 12 straight since a five-overtime loss to Notre Dame.

"Our preparation coming into every game has to be sky-high," Kevin Ware said. "Coach P doesn't allow any letdowns."

Playing Louisville and its relentless press is about as much fun as facing a really angry octopus. The Cardinals look as if they have eight players on the floor, what with all the arms waving and bodies smothering whoever has the bad luck to have the ball, and when one guy sits down, there's one just as physical right there to take his place.

Few teams have had much success against Louisville — there's a reason the Cardinals are the overall No. 1 seed — but Colorado State seemed as if it might have a shot. The Rams run a motion offense that's tough to defend, grab rebounds by the dozens, and are a savvy, veteran team that doesn't

In the first outdoor meet of her high school career, Henderson County freshman Brooke Hensley won the high jump in Saturday's Colonel Classic.

Hensley, who jumped a personal best of 4-10 last year in middle school competition while a student at South Middle School, got a good start to surpassing that mark with a winning effort of 4-8 in cool conditions Saturday morning at Colonel Stadium.

"It was cold. You have to keep your muscles warm. You have to keep moving. You can't really sit down," she said.

After winning the event at 4-8, Hensley decided she had enough for the season-opening meet. "I could have kept going, but my knee was bothering me a little," she said.

She has plenty of time to pursue her goals for the remainder of the season. "I want to beat 4-10 and go to state," she said.

Defending state pole vault champion Cain Cooper started his season with a meet record and first-place finish at 13-1.

"It was a little rough at the beginning because of the wind," said Cooper, who came into the competition at 12-0. He cleared that height to take first place, then made his attempt at 13-1. Cooper then moved the bar up to 13-8, which is two inches above his personal best. "I had one good attempt at it," he said.

Cooper's meet record was one of several that fell on Saturday, including a few stadium records.

Apollo's Hunter Bivin broke the stadium records in both shot put and discus. His throw of 60-3 topped the previous mark of 59-2 in the shot put, set by Cameron Frazier of Daviess County in 2009.

Bivin's throw of 163-5 in the discus beat the 36-year-old stadium record of 161-8 1/2 set by Frank Lutz of Evansville Central in 1977. For his two record-setting performances, Bivin received the David Mitchell Award as the meet's best male performer.

Daviess County's Amelia Reynolds broke the stadium record in the 3,200 with a time of 11:46.67, topping the previous mark of 11:49.3 set by Jackie Wagner of Paducah St. Mary in 2001.

Union County's Jarrell Foster set two meet records in winning the triple jump at 43-8 1/4 and the long jump in 21 1/4.

Other meet records were set by Alex O'Bryan of Apollo in the boys 800 at 2:06.36; Alex Girten of Owensboro in the girls 800 at 2:28.41; Taylor Hampton of Madisonville in the girls 300 hurdles in 50.17; Zantori Dickerson of John Hardin in the girls 400 at 1:02.02 and Whitney O'Bryan of Daviess county in the girls 1,600 at 5:29.27.

Apollo won the boys title with 107 points, topping runner-up Daviess County by 16 points. Henderson County finished fifth with 64 1/2 points.

Owensboro took the girls title with 138 points, easily outdistancing second-place John Hardin with 95. Henderson County was eighth with 46 points.

Henderson County had second and third-place finishes from Johnsha Gregory and Jonbenet Clark in the shot put and discus. Clark was second in the shot put and Gregory third. The order was reversed in the discus.

Kyle Wilson was the runner-up in the 1,600, and Cooper finished second in the discus. Ethan Wilson was third in the 800.

BOWLING GREEN – Henderson County swept two games Saturday at Bowling Green, beating the host Purples 15-5 and then downing Russell County 4-1.

Kaleb Duckworth was 3-for-4 with a double and two runs scored against Bowling Green (4-1). Ryan Ward, Justin Cessna and Colton Jones had two hits apiece. Sam Higgs, Cessna and Jones all drove in two runs.

Daniel Steiner picked up the win in relief of Jones. Steiner allowed two hits and three runs over three innings. He struck out seven and walked three. Jones pitched four innings, giving up two hits and two runs. He struck out nine and walked one.

Leading 6-5, the Colonels put the game away by scoring nine runs in the top of the seventh.

Higgs limited Russell County (0-1) to an unearned run as he allowed six hits and one walk over six innings. He struck out five. Clay Church pitched a perfect seventh inning, striking out two.

Ryan Ward had two of Henderson County's four hits, including a solo home run.

The Colonels (4-2) will host Hopkinsville Thursday in their next game.

It's time to think about nominees for Hall of Fame

Even though the thermometer doesn't say so, spring is here.

That's the time to begin thinking about nominees for the Henderson County Sports Hall of Fame,

The Hall of Fame committee is preparing to sort through nominations provided by the public and to select the inductees for the ceremonies in August.

There are many worthy former athletes and coaches out there who have yet to be recognized.

If you know of a former Henderson County athlete, coach or team who you think deserves induction into the Hall of Fame, let us know.

The committee even welcomes information on people who have been nominated in the past.

The more information the committee can use to make its decision, the better. Newspaper clippings, scrapbooks and awards are perfect for providing information on a nominee.

As each year passes another group of athletes becomes eligible for induction. New nominees also are encouraged strongly. Players who graduated in 2003 will be eligible for the first time this year.

Criteria for nominees are:

Those nominated as players should have graduated from Henderson County High School no later than 2003 or from any of the former local city or county high schools.

If nominated as a player, the nominee should have an exceptional, verifiable record in one or more sports in his or her former high school and/or collegiate or professional career.

Former coaches in any of the local systems are eligible for nomination, provided they no longer are coaching.

Also eligible are individuals who have made outstanding contributions as supporters of the athletic programs of Henderson County High or those of former local high schools — or whose efforts have contributed to the success of such programs.

Nominees should be of good character and should stand as good role models.

A nomination form and guidelines also are available on the Hall of Fame's website at http://wp.me/P1sugG-c A list of past inductees also is on the website.

Those wishing to submit a nominee can email me at kpatton@thegleaner.com, mail the information to Henderson County Sports Hall of Fame, P.O. Box 242, Henderson, Ky., 42419, or give them to any committee member.

Other committee members are: Kenny Tegethoff, Ken Davis, Cary Conley, Mark Veal, Pascal Benson, Vivian Tomblin, Ralph Bridges, Jeff Coursey, Jim Hickerson, John Gabe, Robert Pruitt, Dennis Owens, Trish Daniel, Garrett Veal, Steve Tow, Sara Kemp and Jim Wilson.

Write a brief account of what makes your nominee worthy of induction into the Hall of Fame and include as much supporting documentation as possible.

The deadline to submit nominations for the 2013 induction is April 16, so don't delay in sending in your nominations.

The 2013 class will be honored at the annual Hall of Fame football game Aug. 31 as Henderson County hosts Evansville North in the team's season opener. The banquet is the following night at the high school cafeteria.

Stewart hoping for more good luck at Fontana

■ He's not worried about his slow start this season

Wire reports

A few hours after putting his footprints and signature in drying concrete on Fontana's walk of fame, Tony Stewart hopped on his jet with Kyle Larson and flew 400 miles north to Stockton, Calif., where Larson beat him in a dirt-track race.

Just a typical Friday for Stewart — and just another indication he's not worried about Stewart-Haas Racing's slow start heading into Sunday's fifth race of the NASCAR season.

Wrecks, bad tires and simply unfortunate breaks have combined to keep Stewart way down in 24th place in the overall points standings next to the three-time Sprint Cup series champion's similarly placed teammates, Ryan Newman (23rd) and rookie Danica Patrick (28th). Stewart isn't exactly worried about it just yet, but it's clear Smoke would love to figure out the new Gen-6 car in time to celebrate a third win in four years at Fontana heading into NASCAR's off week.

"Everybody wants an answer that nobody has an answer to right now," said Stewart, who starts eighth Sunday. "Every track that we're going to is a learning deal right now. You're going to go through a lot of races before we all figure out what the car likes and dislikes."

Stewart-Haas could use a bit of the same good fortune that made Stewart the defending champion on this sunbaked, 2-mile course, where he won a rain-shortened race last year. There's no chance of rain in sunny Southern California this weekend, and Stewart sounds confident his team's forecast will improve soon.

"It's just early in the year," said Stewart, who lost tire pressure and spun early last week at Bristol. "If all of us had finished all the races and we're back there because we've been running bad, that would be one thing. We've all had races that we've crashed out of. Four races into a season, that's 25 percent of your points total. Just having one of those (crashes) is enough to mess up the point standings right now."

Tony Stewart

Stewart is among the busiest drivers, helping his goal to race 100 times this year with his trip to Stockton's new dirt track and its 10,000-plus fans. But the hottest driver is Kasey Kahne, who won at Bristol last week after finishing second in Las Vegas two weeks ago.

■ Nationwide Series: Kyle Busch earned Joe Gibbs Racing's ninth consecutive Nationwide Series victory at Fontana on Saturday, comfortably beating Sam Hornish Jr. for his third win in five races this season.

Joe Gibbs Racing's Toyotas haven't lost a Nationwide race on their unofficial home track since 2007. Busch pushed ahead late in a back-and-forth duel with Nationwide points leader Hornish's Ford to win his second straight Nationwide race.

What's more, Parker Kligerman drove his Kyle Busch Motorsports Toyota to a fourth-place finish. Regan Smith was third, and Austin Dillon came in fifth ahead of Kyle Larson.

Through changes in cars and crew chiefs, Busch has won six times at Fontana. He's the Nationwide career victory leader with 54.

■ IndyCar Series: Will Power won the pole for the IndyCar season opener at St. Petersburg.

The Penske Racing driver earned the top starting spot for Sunday's race on his final lap of the qualifying session. It's the 30th pole of Power's career, moving him past Dario Franchitti for seventh on IndyCar's all-time list.

Takuma Sato qualified second Saturday and was followed by Simona de Silvestro in the highest qualifying effort of her career.

Longshot Black Onyx wins the Spiral Stakes

The Associated Press

FLORENCE, Ky. – Black Onyx took a big step toward the Kentucky Derby, winning the $550,000 Spiral Stakes at Turfway Park on Saturday.

Sterling Racing's 16-1 long shot ridden by Joe Bravo surged from eighth at the start and cleared Taken by the Storm inside the furlong marker to take control down the stretch for his third victory in five career starts.

Black Onyx ran 1 1/8-miles in 1:51.98 and paid $33.40, $14.20 and $10.80.

Uncaptured, the second choice at 3-1, was 1½ lengths back in his debut with Miguel Mena aboard and paid $5.80 and $4.80. Giant Finish, ridden by Jose L. Espinoza, finished a length back and paid $14.40 to show.

Black Onyx earned 50 points in the Road to the Kentucky Derby standings, and trainer Kelly Breen planned to pay the $6,000 Triple Crown entry fee for a horse that wasn't an early nominee.

"He's proven he's a multi-talented horse," Breen said. "He's won on dirt, on turf, and now on Polytrack. The plan was — if he won — that we wouldn't run again until the Derby. His next start will be the Derby."

Woods seizes control at Bay Hill with his 66

Wire reports

Tiger Woods is one round away from returning to No. 1 in the world.

With key par saves early in his round and an eagle for the third straight day at Bay Hill, Woods seized control Saturday with a 6-under 66 to race by Justin Rose and build a two-shot lead going into the final round of the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

Woods was at 11-under 205, two shots ahead of Rickie Fowler (67), John Huh (71) and Rose, who at one point was six shots ahead of Woods. Rose had a 39 on the back nine and wound up with a 72.

Woods hasn't been No. 1 in the world ranking since the last week of October 2010. That can change Sunday with a victory on a Bay Hill course where he already has won seven times, and from a position where he hardly ever loses. Woods is 41-2 on the PGA Tour when he has the outright lead going into the final round.

Rose had a three-shot lead on the back nine until he crumbled, making three bogeys over the last six holes.

Fowler dropped only one shot on a muggy day with a short burst of showers, closing with a par from the back bunker on the 18th. The last time Fowler and Woods were paired together in the final round was at the Memorial, where Woods closed with a 67 to win and Fowler had an 84.

Woods, who already had won twice this year, has a clearer vision of what he's doing and where the ball is going. He surged ahead with a 6-iron into 12 feet on the 15th for birdie, and another 6-iron into 20 feet on the 16th for an eagle that put him atop the leaderboard. He can tie a PGA Tour record for most victories at one tournament. Sam Snead won the Greater Greensboro Open eight times.

■ LPGA Tour: Beatriz Recari drove the green on the 285-yard 16th hole to set up a 4-foot eagle putt and finished with a 3-under 69 on Saturday for a two-stroke lead in the Kia Classic.

Recari, the 25-year-old Spaniard who won her lone LPGA Tour title in 2010, had an 11-under 205 total at Aviara Golf Club.

Hall of Famer Karrie Webb was second after a 70. Winless since the 2011 Founders Cup in Phoenix, Webb dropped strokes with bogeys on Nos. 13 and 17.

■ Champions Tour: Corey Pavin birdied his first six holes and finished with a 5-under 67 to join Bernhard Langer, Roger Chapman and Joe Daley atop the leaderboard after the second round of the Champions Tour's Mississippi Gulf Resort Classic.

■ Malaysian Open: Thailand's Kiradech Aphibarnrat led the Malaysian Open at 11 under when third-round play was suspended because of thunderstorms at Kuala Lumpur Golf and Country Club.

Kansas City's Negro Leagues Baseball Museum is hosting an advance screening of an upcoming movie about Jackie Robinson, who broke major league baseball's color barrier. Thomas Butch of the financial firm Waddell and Reed announced Wednesday that actors Harrison Ford and Andre Holland will be among those appearing at an April 11 screening.

Camo, neon aren't college basketball fan favorites

NEW YORK – It seems an unpopular position in college basketball is fashion forward.

The neon-colored jerseys and camouflage-covered shorts debuted by six teams in their postseason conference championships ahead of the NCAA men's basketball tournaments weren't well received in the press or social media, with critics particularly targeting UCLA, Kansas and Notre Dame because of the schools' tradition-rich athletic histories. Louisville, Cincinnati and Baylor also got uniform makeovers from Adidas, and they didn't go over so well, either.

They were called Underoos, Fruit Stripes and LMFAO costumes. Some people just called them ugly — and you can search for them online that way.

The changes happened to be in line with fashion runways and recreational athleticwear, where highlighter brights and creative camo have been bona fide trends. And alternate uniforms have become part of the college football and basketball landscape — but these uniforms still made some fans cringe.

"What is distracting is all the patterns," said Sam Gordon, a Johns Hopkins student and big NCAA basketball fan. "It could take the crowd's focus away from a player's jump shot to what they are wearing."

Jeff Halmos, half of the menswear designer duo Shipley & Halmos, called the uniforms "ultra-forward" — but that may not be a compliment.

"I was so shocked at UCLA. If I was part of a storied franchise like that, I'd say, 'Absolutely not.' I would tell my team that it's an honor to wear this traditional jersey, and I wouldn't cheapen it," he said. "There's a threshold to which innovation crosses a boundary. The 'throwback era' — when classic uniforms had a mainstream moment a few years ago — that was so much better. To me, there's so much in menswear that's about heritage."

Even President Barack Obama felt compelled to weigh in. In going through his bracket with ESPN, he cited the uniforms as a reason Notre Dame shouldn't go any further than the second round, saying "that neon glow wasn't working for me."

If the goal was buzz, though, that's certainly been accomplished. And maybe these limited-edition uniforms weren't created for most of the armchair — or bar stool — fans. They could be a recruiting tool for next-gen talent, said Will Welch, senior editor of GQ magazine.

"There's something gimmicky about them, but outlandish choices like this can end up defining an era," said Welch. "They're pretty shocking now, but I'm an adult fan, and that's different from being a 12-year-old kid dying to grow up and play at Kansas or Louisville. ... There's a good chance that these kids love the idea of debuting something that's exciting."

Former NBA star has new job as crossing guard

SILVER SPRING, Md. – Former NBA star Adrian Dantley spent years guarding opponents on the court. Now he's guarding schoolchildren as they cross the street.

Radio station WTOP reports that Dantley, a hall-of-famer and former star for the Utah Jazz and Detroit Pistons, started working as a crossing guard in September. He works an hour a day at Eastern Middle School and New Hampshire Estates Elementary School in Silver Spring, Md.

Ths 6-foot-5 Dantley grew up in the area and says he took the job for the health care benefits and to have something to do. Montgomery County civil service records show he gets paid $14,685.50 a year. Dantley says he doesn't need the money.

He says he enjoys giving the young children high fives and encouragement.

Robinson film screenings to help fund Kansas City Negro Leagues

By Bill Draper
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – Kansas City was announced Wednesday as the host site for the only advance public screenings of a film chronicling the rise of Jackie Robinson, a nod to the city where the baseball great made his professional debut two years before breaking the major league color barrier.

Harrison Ford stars as former Brooklyn Dodgers General Manager Branch Rickey in the film, "42," which details Robinson's Rookie of the Year season in 1947 while combating unabashed racism on and off the diamond.

Ford and fellow cast member Andre Holland planned to attend the screenings on April 11 at a movie theater on the city's north side. Proceeds will benefit the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum in Kansas City, museum president Bob Kendrick said.

Although the story of Robinson in Brooklyn is well known, Kendrick said Kansas City also played a prominent role in his early career. Robinson played for the Kansas City Monarchs, a member of the Negro Leagues, in 1945, batting .387 while hitting five home runs and stole 13 bases in 47 games. After a year in the minor leagues, he joined the Dodgers in 1947 and won the inaugural Rookie of the Year award.

The film gets its name from Robinson's uniform No. 42, which is retired throughout baseball and prominently displayed at major league stadiums

Kendrick said Robinson's story "signaled the beginning of what we know as the civil rights movement" and was a source of pride for Kansas City.

"This film gives us the opportunity to collectively stick out our chest," Kendrick said Wednesday at a news conference at the museum.

Other than the official premiere in Los Angeles, the movie will be shown only in Kansas City prior to its nationwide opening April 12, which is three days before the 66th anniversary of Robinson's first game as a Dodger.

The Negro Leagues museum is in the midst of a revival after falling on hard times following the death in 2006 of one of its founders, former Kansas City Monarchs star Buck O'Neil. Only blocks from where the Monarchs took the field at Municipal Stadium, the museum sits adjacent to the American Jazz Museum in the heart of the city's 18th and Vine District. After nearly being forced to close in 2010 after it started losing money, the museum got a huge boost last year when Kansas City hosted the major league All-Star Game.

Kendrick said the exposure "42" brings to the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum will be as important as the financial windfall from the advance screenings.

"We're often asked here if Jackie Robinson was the best player in the Negro Leagues," Kendrick said. "No, he wasn't. He may not have been the best player on our Kansas City Monarchs team. But he was the right man" to break the color barrier.

The Overland Park, Kan., financial planning company Waddell & Reed was instrumental in bringing the screenings to Kansas City, taking advantage of its relationship with Legendary Pictures — which along with Warner Bros. Pictures produced the movie — to arrange them.

Thomas Butch, executive president of Waddell & Reed, said the $42 tickets include unlimited concessions, two adult drink tickets and a souvenir bag and has a total value of $70. He said "42" is the only movie that will be shown at the BarryWoods 24 complex on the night of the screenings.

Tickets are available exclusively on the website 42kansascity.com.

Baseball struggles to reach black America

Globalize, globalize, globalize. That's been Bud Selig's — and by extension Major League Baseball's — mantra as the World Baseball Classic has unfolded this month.

But the push to bring baseball to all corners of the globe comes as one of the sport's key demographics continues to vanish right here at home.

For the first time in memory, the San Francisco Giants, reigning champions, have no African-American players in camp this spring. It's a stunning development on a team whose history is molded by Willie Mays and Willie McCovey, Frank Robinson and Dusty Baker.

"I didn't realize it had gotten that dramatic," said Noah Jackson, whose First Base Foundation program works to give minority athletes in the San Francisco Bay Area the opportunity to play baseball.

The Giants are, according to Comcast Sports Net's Andrew Baggarly, the only team in the majors without an African-American player this spring. They're extreme but not alone: This is just a tangible sign of an ongoing league-wide trend. The number of African-American players in the game has steadily declined, from a high of almost 30 percent in the 1970s, to just 8.05 percent last year.

So as MLB rushes to convert the world to baseball, what can it do to strengthen one of its homegrown cornerstones?

"My fear is that this is not the sport of choice," said Giants general manager Brian Sabean. "We're thriving up here at this level, but we can't produce players fast enough. We're no longer the national pastime."

Major League Baseball has put programs into place to attract and support youth in underserved communities. The RBI (Reviving Baseball in Inner Cities) program is beginning its 25th season and has, according to director David James, reached more than a million young people.

The forces at work against minority players are numerous, from the high cost of travel ball programs — the primary platforms where young players can be noticed — to the lack of college scholarships.

Under NCAA rules, Division I baseball programs are allowed 11.7 scholarships to divide among a roster of about 35 players. In contrast, football offers 85 full scholarships for a roster of 70 and basketball offers 13 full scholarships for a roster of 15.

While football and basketball players are guaranteed full rides, a player opting for baseball will still be stuck with most of an enormous tuition bill or have to enter the general financial aid pool.

"Athletes look at baseball and wonder, 'What's the end game?'" said Sabean, who noted that the proliferation of higher-profile mid-major basketball and football programs makes the challenge for baseball even greater.

This season, the Atlanta Braves will field an all African-American outfield: Jason Heyward and the Upton brothers. But most of the rising young American stars of the game — players like Mike Trout, Bryce Harper and Buster Posey — are white.

"Too many kids in high school don't see any minority faces, and they find out it's not a welcoming sport," Jackson said.

Year of Interleague intrigue

■ Baseball in 2013 will seem like a mini-World Series most every day

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

EVAN VUCCI/ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Houston Astros' Carlos Pena smiles as he walks back to the dugout after hitting a two-run home run during a spring training game against the New York Mets on Wednesday, March 20, in Kissimmee, Fla. The Astros will switch to the American League this season.

On a windy morning at spring training, a trio of Phillies catchers met behind the batting cage to shoot the breeze.

The topic? Interleague intrigue, right from the get-go.

"We were just talking about that in batting practice that it's a little weird to face the American League so early," All-Star Carlos Ruiz said. "But it's a different schedule this year."

Sure is.

Josh Hamilton and the Los Angeles Angels visit Cincinnati in an opener that's hardly traditional. Triple Crown winner Miguel Cabrera and the Detroit Tigers finish the season at Miami — minus a designated hitter.

Derek Jeter and the Yankees cross over to the National League each month, then host World Series champion San Francisco in late September. Just a guess — New York fans will howl at the prospect of seeing Matt Cain and the pitching-rich Giants if a playoff spot is at stake.

Add up the scattered AL vs. NL matchups, it's like a mini-World Series most every day.

"It's going to be totally different," said Houston manager Bo Porter, one of six new skippers in the majors.

Might as well blame Porter's Astros, too. Their shift from the NL Central to the AL West left 15 teams in each league, creating all this havoc.

Opening day is March 31 in Houston when Texas comes to town for a Sunday night start.

That's followed by Angels-Reds on April 1. A few days later, Philadelphia plays its home opener — against the Kansas City Royals.

Just sounds jarring, doesn't it?

"It is very strange," Cincinnati manager Dusty Baker said. "This usually doesn't happen until June or July."

"What it does is it increases your workload on scouting, advance reports and things like that. You don't have a lot of familiarity on those teams," he said.

Meanwhile, a lot of big names are settling into new settings.

Hamilton left Texas for the Angels, teaming with Albert Pujols and Mike Trout in a most fearsome lineup. Zack Greinke got $147 million to pitch for the Los Angeles Dodgers. Brothers Justin and B.J Upton wound up together in Atlanta's outfield.

The Toronto Blue Jays, out of the postseason since winning their second straight title in 1993, made the boldest moves. They traded for reigning Cy Young winner R.A. Dickey, Jose Reyes, Josh Johnson and Mark Buehrle and signed Melky Cabrera.

"Talent alone doesn't win," Blue Jays manager John Gibbons cautioned.

Especially if those stars are sidelined.

New Mets captain David Wright, Hanley Ramirez and Mark Teixeira got hurt at the World Baseball Classic. Curtis Granderson and Chase Headley are out, Johan Santana and Derek Jeter might go on the disabled list and Alex Rodriguez's future is in doubt.

Several top players are on the mend, though.

All-time saves leader Mariano Rivera begins his farewell tour after missing most of last year with a knee injury. John Lackey and Victor Martinez were absent for the entire season and Jose Bautista, Troy Tulowitzki and Carl Crawford finished on the DL.

Stephen Strasburg wasn't active at the end, either. The Washington Nationals shut down their ace so he wouldn't pitch too many innings, and fizzled in their first playoff appearance.

No limits on Strasburg or the Nats this time around.

"I'm excited. I think everybody in the baseball world, not just us, is really excited to see him all year," 20-year-old Washington star Bryce Harper said.

In the meantime, teams are figuring out how to prepare for this funny season. Previously, Porter said, it was easy to plan for blocks of interleague games.

"A lot of times, a National League team would call up a DH-type guy during that segment of their schedule," he said. "Now, that's hard to do because you're going to have interleague taking place the entire course of the season. It definitely changes roster construction."

Porter already has his pitchers in the cage, working on their bunting. Too soon for Justin Verlander and the Detroit staff to swing away.

"We'll have to hit some, but it's a Catch-22 because I don't want Verlander breaking his finger," Tigers manager Jim Leyland said.

As for his AL Central champions closing on the road against the Marlins, "whatever is good for baseball," the 68-year-old Leyland said.

"We have a designated hitter in the All-Star game, instant replay. Things change and if it is good for the game, I am all for it," he said.

The Tigers, Boston, Toronto and Seattle each play at NL parks in September, leaving them a hitter short.

"It's definitely an advantage for the National League," Leyland said. "It works out more advantageous to them. I think eventually they'll go uniform."

Adds Rays manager Joe Maddon: "It's going to be clunky at the end."

Baltimore doesn't play its first NL road games until Memorial Day, but has eight straight out West in August. Orioles catcher Matt Wieters figures he'll spend more time "going over scouting reports on new hitters we haven't seen."

St. Louis doesn't see an AL opponent until it plays Kansas City in late May. But the Royals go to Philadelphia and Atlanta in the first 2½ weeks.

When interleague play started in 1997, Cardinals pitcher Jake Westbrook said, "it was something new and it seemed odd to a lot of people. The DH, same thing with that longer ago."

"The idea of interleague play most every day, this is something else new. That's always been a question with interleague play — it's unbalanced, who plays who," he said.

Baker is hoping for an early edge when Pujols arrives.

"In the case of us playing the Angels, does Albert not play? Does he DH? I wouldn't mind if Albert just spectated," he said. "He'd be a mean pinch hitter. He's probably greasing his glove right now."

Later that week, Phillies great Mike Schmidt will test his arm. He was the MVP of the 1980 World Series when Philadelphia beat George Brett and the Royals — the Hall of Famers are set to throw out the first balls when Kansas City visits Citizens Bank Park for the first time since 2004.

"Playing your home opener against an AL team is weird," Schmidt said. "Where's the charm in that?"

Ten things to know for the 2013 baseball season

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

An around-the-bases look at the 2013 major league season that starts March 31 when the Texas Rangers visit the Houston Astros:

1. STAR SIGHTINGS ...

Glam slam in LA! Josh Hamilton joined Albert Pujols and Mike Trout in a juicy Angels lineup, Zack Greinke zeroed in on the Dodgers. Other top winter destinations: Toronto (R.A. Dickey, Jose Reyes, Melky Cabrera, Josh Johnson, Mark Buehrle) and Boston (Ryan Dempster, Shane Victorino, Mike Napoli).

2. MAKING THEIR MOVES ...

A half-dozen new managers. Terry Francona (Cleveland), John Farrell (Boston), Mike Redmond (Miami), Bo Porter (Houston) and John Gibbons (Toronto), plus the most intriguing hire: Former shortstop Walt Weiss goes from high school coach to big league skipper in Colorado.

3. REMEMBER ME?

Tigers slugger Victor Martinez was injured for all of 2012. Mariano Rivera, Troy Tulowitzki and Jose Bautista also finished on the disabled list. They're back, along with Derek Jeter and Carl Crawford. Let's wait to see Hanley Ramirez, David Wright and Mark Teixeira — they got hurt at the World Baseball Classic.

4. WE PLAY WHO?

The Astros' shift from the NL to the AL leaves 15 teams in each league. That'll mean an interleague game most every day. The new-wave scheduling starts April 1 when the Angels visit Cincinnati in a decidedly nontraditional opener.

5. SPEAKING OF THE ASTROS ...

With a team payroll matching Alex Rodriguez's salary and coming off 107 losses, Houston could be way out of its league. A possible result: AL West opponents might feast on the Astros, run up win totals and produce both wild cards.

6. OH, BROTHER ...

Nearly 100 sets of siblings have teamed up in big league history. The Alomars, the Boones, the Ripkens — heck, three Alous once formed the starting outfield for the Giants. Next up, B.J. and Justin Upton for the Braves. Their parents will keep a watchful eye; they already have season tickets at Turner Field.

7. UPON FURTHER REVIEW ...

No additional replay this year. Baseball is still trying to decide what to review (out or safe at first base?), which video technology to use and who should make the call. Stand by for 2014. Maybe.

8. DEBATES ON THE FIELD ...

Fans in Washington still wonder how far they could've gone last year if Stephen Strasburg didn't get shut down. There's no innings limit on the ace now, as the Nats try to bring the World Series to D.C. San Francisco, meanwhile, aims to win the title for the third time in four years.

9. DEBATES OFF THE FIELD ...

RBIs vs. VORP. ERA vs. BABIP. The Miguel Cabrera-Mike Trout MVP race ramped up the rhetoric between new stats and old values. Both sides dug in, the arguments got louder, the insults intensified. A little more listening, a lot less yelling might show there's plenty of middle ground.

10. SEE YA AROUND ...

Get your tickets now for the Mariano Rivera Farewell Tour. Go see Mo and leave with a memory. Many opposing hitters already got souvenirs — splinters of their bats he shattered with that cut fastball.

Baseball 2013: Some key dates for the upcoming season

By Jay Cohen
Associated Press

A Lone Star State opener, a Big Apple All-Star game and one unusual induction ceremony for the Hall of Fame highlight the 2013 major league season. A handful of dates to mark on the schedule:

SUNDAY, MARCH 31

Texas Rangers at Houston Astros: It's the first American League appearance for the Astros, who lost more than 100 games in each of their last two years in the NL.

MONDAY, APRIL 1

San Francisco Giants at Los Angeles Dodgers: The World Series winners begin their defense against the rival Dodgers, who think they can make it two titles in a row for the NL West.

FRIDAY, APRIL 5

Los Angeles Angels at Texas Rangers: Baseball gets one awkward return out of the way in the first week when Hamilton plays his first game in Texas since he left the Rangers in December for a $125 million, five-year contract with the rival Angels.

MONDAY, APRIL 29

Washington Nationals at Atlanta Braves: Tons of speed and power in the outfield when the Nationals make their first trip of the season to Atlanta to face the new-look Braves.

TUESDAY, JULY 16

All-Star game: The New York Mets' Citi Field hosts the Midsummer Classic for the first time since it opened in 2009. It's the first All-Star game in New York since 2008.

FRIDAY, JULY 19

New York Yankees at Boston Red Sox: It's always a circus when these AL East powers meet, but this one could take on added significance depending on the status of Yankees slugger Alex Rodriguez.

SUNDAY, JULY 28

Hall of Fame inductions: For the first time since 1996, not one player received the 75 percent required for induction when the baseball writers voted for the Hall of Fame. So this year's Cooperstown class includes Yankees owner Jacob Ruppert, umpire Hank O'Day and bare-handed catcher Deacon White, who all died more than 70 years ago.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 31

Trade deadline: The last chance for teams to make deals without having to first pass players through waivers.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2

St. Louis Cardinals at Cincinnati Reds: Joey Votto and the Reds are coming off their second NL Central title in three years, and they're looking for a whole lot more this season after trading for Shin-Soo Choo to fill the giant void at the top of the lineup. Their biggest competition in the division could be the Cardinals, who lost right-hander Chris Carpenter and shortstop Rafael Furcal to injuries before the season even started, but always seem to find a way to contend.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1

Cleveland Indians at Detroit Tigers: The Indians, Royals and White Sox all could challenge the Tigers for the AL Central crown. The improved Tribe opens the final month of the season with their last scheduled game against the Tigers.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 29

Tampa Bay Rays at Toronto Blue Jays: Baseball's only remaining team in Canada hasn't made it to the playoffs since it won consecutive World Series titles in 1992 and 1993. That could change this year after Toronto revamped its rotation and lineup during an unusually active winter.

Briefs

Dixon stays at Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH – So much for speculation that Jamie Dixon is leaving Pittsburgh.

Saying he wants to "finish his career" with the Panthers, Dixon agreed to a contract extension on Saturday that will keep him signed through 2023.

There had been talk that USC was targeting Dixon, a Southern California native, for its open job.

The Panthers went 24-9 this season and finished fourth in their final year in the Big East but were blown out by Wichita State in the second round of the NCAA tournament on Thursday.

Dixon is 262-86 in a decade with the Panthers, who are moving on to the ACC this summer.

Marlins edge Cardinals 6-5

JUPITER, Fla. – Chris Coghlan hit an RBI single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning off Marc Rzepczynski, lifting the Miami Marlins over the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 Saturday.

Gorkys Hernandez drove in three runs for the Marlins. He got his RBIs with a groundout, sacrifice fly and singled.

Matt Holliday and Yadier Molina each had two hits and an RBI for the Cardinals.

Cardinals starter Lance Lynn gave up three runs and four hits in 5 2-3 innings. He walked two, struck out five and hit consecutive batters starting the fourth.

Motte may start season on the DL

JUPITER, Fla. – St. Louis Cardinals closer Jason Motte probably will start the season on the disabled because of a mild muscle flexor strain in his pitching arm.

The Cardinals said Saturday that the right-hander had stopped throwing following the results of an MRI a day earlier.

Motte pitched an inning against the New York Mets on Thursday in Port St. Lucie, then told the team his forearm tightened up on the bus ride back to the Cardinals' spring training complex.

Motte was 0-0 with one save and a 5.00 ERA in nine innings during spring training.

Setup man Mitchell Boggs will move into the closer's role.

Zbikowski signs to play for Bears

LAKE FOREST, Ill. – The Chicago Bears have agreed to a one-year contract with safety Tom Zbikowski.

The Bears announced the signing Saturday.

The Notre Dame alum and professional boxer has appeared in 64 games with 25 starts over five seasons with Indianapolis in 2012 and with Baltimore from 2008 to 2011.

Zbikowski recorded 89 tackles, three interceptions, eight pass breakups and two sacks during those seasons.

Pro Bowl punter Lechler to Texans

HOUSTON – The Houston Texans have signed punter Shane Lechler.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed by the team Saturday. ESPN reported the deal was for three years and worth a maximum of $5.5 million, with a $1 million signing bonus.

The 36-year-old Lechler is the NFL's career leader in gross average per punt (47.3 yards) and has led the league in gross average in four seasons.

He's the second perennial Pro Bowler to join the Texans in two days. Safety Ed Reed was introduced at a news conference Friday.

Wolverines breeze past VCU

■ Michigan St. rips Memphis; Arizona ends Harvard story

Wire reports

Mitch McGary had 21 points and 14 rebounds, and fourth-seeded Michigan breezed through Virginia Commonwealth's vaunted pressure with a clinical performance and advanced to the round of 16 for the first time since 1994 with a 78-53 victory on Saturday.

VCU (27-9) was relentless in a 46-point rout of Akron on Thursday night, but the Rams met their match against Michigan's cool-headed backcourt. Trey Burke and Tim Hardaway Jr. rarely looked rattled against VCU, and although Michigan (28-7) committed 12 turnovers, the Rams couldn't turn many of them into quick scoring opportunities.

McGary, a 6-foot-10 freshman, set season highs in scoring and rebounding.

The 71-point swing by VCU — from a 46-point win to a 25-point loss — was the largest in NCAA tournament history, according to STATS. In 1968, Houston beat Texas Christian 103-68, then lost to UCLA 101-69 for a 67-point swing.

The Wolverines will play the winner of Sunday's game between Kansas and North Carolina in Arlington, Texas.

■ Michigan State 70, Memphis 48: Gary Harris scored 16 of his career-high 23 points in the first half to help third-seeded Michigan State reach the round of 16 for the fifth time in six years.

Michigan State (27-8) will play the winner of the Duke-Creighton game on Friday in the Midwest Regional semifinals at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis.

The Tigers (31-5) advanced in the NCAA tournament for the first time in Josh Pastner's four seasons. The Conference USA champions were eliminated in the third round because they struggled to stop Harris on the outside or his teammates inside all afternoon.

The Spartans' top post players — Adreian Payne and Derrick Nix — combined for 27 points and 18 rebounds.

■ Arizona 74, Harvard 51: Arizona put an emphatic end to Harvard's March Madness success story.

Mark Lyons matched his career high with 27 points to lead the sixth-seeded Wildcats (27-7). Arizona sprinted to a 30-9 lead, as the Crimson (20-10) missed 20 of its first 22 shots.

Lyons led Arizona to the program's 15th appearance in the Sweet 16. The Wildcats will play Iowa State or Ohio State next week in Los Angeles.

Harvard, meanwhile, goes home with its first NCAA win in tow. The 14th-seeded Crimson beat third-seeded New Mexico on Thursday but couldn't recreate the magic.

Kenyatta Smith led Harvard with 10 points. Freshman Siyani Chambers lost part of his front tooth after Arizona's Kevin Parrom elbowed him in the face.

■ Oregon 74, Saint Louis 57: Damyean Dotson scored 23 points, Carlos Emory added 14 points and hot-shooting Oregon sprinted past fourth-seeded Saint Louis.

Dotson made his first five 3-pointers to carry the 12th-seeded Ducks (28-8) into the second weekend for the first time since 2007, when they lost to eventual repeat champion Florida in the regional final. Oregon made 8 of 11 shots from beyond the arc, while the Billikens finished 3 for 21 from long range.

Kwamain Mitchell scored 18 points and Dwayne had 16 points and nine rebounds for the Billikens (28-7), who set a school record for wins this season following the death of coach Rick Majerus in December.

■ Marquette 74, Butler 72: Vander Blue scored 19 second-half points to rally third-seeded Marquette out of another hole, and the Golden Eagles survived No. 6 Butler 74-72 on Saturday to reach the Round of 16.

Like November's first meeting between the teams at the Maui Invitational, won 72-71 by Butler on Rotnei Clarke's buzzer-beating 3-pointer, this was a back-and-forth, high-intensity affair, that came down to the final shot.

Only this time, Butler missed.

Marquette (25-8) will meet the winner of Sunday's game between Illinois and Miami (Fla.) on Thursday in Washington, D.C.

Clarke's 24 points led Butler (28-9).

■ Wichita State 76, Gonzaga 70: Cleanthony Early and Ron Baker scored 16 points apiece and Wichita State hit a season-high 14 3-pointers, including seven straight late, to knock the top-ranked and No. 1 seeded Bulldogs out of the NCAA tournament 76-70 on Saturday night.

The Shockers (28-8) advanced to the Round of 16 for the first time since 2006, while Gonzaga becomes the first top seed to be eliminated.

Gonzaga survived a scare in the second round against Southern but couldn't hold up against a fellow mid-major from Kansas whose motto is "play angry."

The Shockers face the winner of Sunday's game between La Salle and Ole Miss.

Kelly Olynyk scored 26 points to lead Gonzaga (32-3), and Kevin Pangos had 19.

The Final Four countdown is on for hopeful Lady Wildcats

Hanging in front of the Kentucky locker room is a picture of the Final Four logo with a clock next to it.

Ever since the first day of practice back in early October, that clock has been counting down the days and minutes until the Final Four in New Orleans. Now with the NCAA tournament here, the second-seeded Wildcats hope to be in Louisiana at their first Final Four when the clock reaches zero.

Kentucky will open up its NCAA tournament Sunday against No. 15 Navy. Seventh-seed Dayton will play No. 10 St. John's in the second game.

"You have no chance of winning the national championship if you don't get to the Final Four," Kentucky coach Matthew Mitchell said. "We're focused on our region and trying to advance through it and win our four games."

The Wildcats made the regional final last season before falling to Connecticut. The two teams potentially could meet again in the Bridgeport final.

Kentucky (27-5), which is coming off a disappointing loss in the SEC title games to Texas A&M, has made the NCAA tournament four straight seasons and matched its best seeding.

"It's very exciting to have an opportunity to be a number 2 seed," Kentucky senior A'dia Mathies said. "Our ultimate goal is to go to the Final Four and it's achievable."

■ The Cardinals don't want to get overly excited about opening the NCAA tournament at home in Louisville against Middle Tennessee.

So coach Jeff Walz has his players staying in their dorms and going to class as he tries to keep their routine as close to normal as possible. Louisville (24-8) ranked third nationally averaging 9,577 this season in the KFC Yum! Center. Walz is expecting between 8,000 and 10,000 fans, maybe more if fans just want more hoops after the men's team returns from Lexington.

So it'll be the usual team meal followed by curfew.

"I definitely don't want to change things up to try to throw a kink in the plan," Walz said Saturday.

Louisville hosted the NCAA tournament in 2010, but didn't qualify for the tournament after making a run to the championship game a year before. The Cardinals lost to national champion Connecticut in 2009. Now the Cardinals are in their third season in their modern arena — and though they've lost two of their last three games — are looking to turn things around.

CARDS from 1B

turn the ball over. In fact, when Pitino made out his "dangerous" list before the tournament began, Colorado State was on it.

"We were sick about this game," Pitino said. "We really were."

So much for that.

Colorado State actually shot the ball well — 47.5 percent. The Cardinals just wouldn't let them do it very often, limiting the Rams to 18 shots in the first half and 40 total.

They hounded Colorado State when it was inbounding the ball; the Rams had back-to-back possessions in the first half when they couldn't even get the ball in play. They circled Colorado State when the Rams brought it up, with more than one turnover coming on a desperation heave across midcourt to beat the whistle. And, of course, they clogged up every inch of the court where the Rams might have a view of their basket, repeatedly slapping the ball away or stepping in front of passes.

The Rams reached their season average in turnovers (11) by halftime, and topped their previous worst for the season (16) with 15:33 still to play.

"We've seen them against North Carolina A&T and some other teams and kind of get prepared for it. But you see the bodies out there flying around and doing what they do, it's a lot different," Greg Smith said. "It's just total chaos. Some of those guys are just so fast, and you may think that you have an open lane or you think the pass is coming and they close it down so quick."

Meanwhile, the Cardinals were scoring at will.

Two days after matching the NCAA tournament record with eight steals, Smith's well-rounded scoring line had Louisville fans chanting "Russ Arena" — sure to go over well with the Kentucky fans. Even LeBron James took note, saying on Twitter: "The lil homie Russ Smith putting on a show right now! (hasthtag)onfire"

After Daniel Berajano's 3 pulled Colorado State within 21-19 with 9:12 left in the first half, Russ Smith went off. His 3-pointer sparked a 22-7 run that effectively put the game out of reach. Though five Cardinals scored during the spurt, Russ Smith did most of the damage with 13 points in about six minutes.

He finished the day 4-of-7 from long range, and missed only one of his 10 free throws. He also had three rebounds, two assists and two steals.

"Just give him the ball. It's as simple as that," Peyton Siva said of his backcourt mate's hot streak. "He's a scoring machine. He makes my job a lot easier. I just have to feed him the ball, get my assists up and get back on defense."

Temple coach can't find any flaws with Hoosiers

By Tom Withers
Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio – Temple coach Fran Dunphy isn't the sugarcoating type. He's a non-nonsense guy from Philly. He calls it the way he sees it.

So Dunphy wasn't about to pretend he isn't nervous about the Owls facing top-seeded Indiana, a team with size, speed, power, depth, two All-American candidates and 3-point shooters at every position, a program primed to make another run to a national championship.

Hard to find any flaws in these Hoosiers.

"The problem is there's not a weakness they have," Dunphy said Saturday. "We're concerned."

And rightly so.

Temple, which scraped past North Carolina State in the opening round, faces a daunting task Sunday when it meets Indiana in the third round of the NCAA tournament. The Hoosiers (28-6) have been one of the nation's most consistent teams all season and seem to be peaking at the perfect time.

Dunphy knows what he and his team are up against.

"There's a reason why they are a first seed," he said. "They're a terrific team."

Indiana wasted little time in blowing out James Madison to win its opener 83-62, a game that wasn't nearly as close as the final score. The Hoosiers blitzed the overmatched Dukes from the start, built a 33-point lead and were in such control in the second half that coach Tom Crean was able to get his starters some valuable rest.

Temple's players were in the stands to watch, and get a firsthand look at the Hoosiers. The ninth-seeded Owls were impressed, but they're not frightened.

Toppers show 'lot of heart'

■ WKU gives top-seeded Jayhawks all they want before falling 64-57

By Dave Skretta
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – Western Kentucky carried a lead into halftime against mighty Kansas, and not once did the thought that the Hilltoppers were on the verge of history cross their minds.

Not once did they think that maybe, just maybe, they could be the first No. 16 seed to ever knock off a top-seeded team in the NCAA tournament.

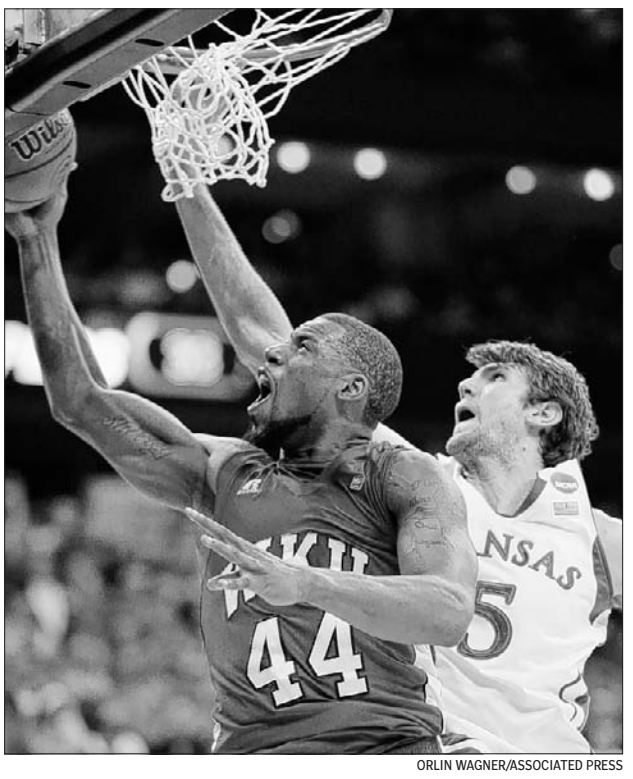
"We knew what we had to do, we had to play basketball, regardless of what seed we were," the Hilltoppers' Jamal Crook said. "It wasn't really a focal point for us."

The Hilltoppers stuck to their stubborn focus throughout the second half, and nearly finished off the improbable win. If not for 17 points from Jeff Withey and a series of free throws from Ben McLemore and Naadir Tharpe, Kansas may not have escaped with a 64-57 victory Friday night.

"I thought they were the most aggressive team. I thought they controlled the game for the most part," Kansas coach Bill Self said. "We're happy to advance, but certainly not pleased with how we play, and know we'll have to play a lot better on Sunday."

The Jayhawks will face former coach Roy Williams and eighth-seeded North Carolina, which beat Villanova 78-71 earlier in the night, for a spot in the South Region's round of 16.

That dream matchup of college basketball blue bloods nearly didn't happen thanks to scrappy Western Kentucky (20-16), which used stifling full-court pressure to shake up the Jayhawks (30-5), take a 31-30 lead into the break and then keep within striking distance down the stretch.



ORLIN WAGNER/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Western Kentucky forward George Fant (44) shoots while being covered by Kansas center Jeff Withey (5) during the second half of a second-round game in the NCAA tournament on Friday night in Kansas City. Kansas defeated WKU 64-57.

Kansas didn't seal the game until McLemore's two foul shots with 11 seconds left.

"I think the entire country got a glimpse of what they're made of, a lot of character, a lot of heart," Western Kentucky coach Ray Harper said. "A lot of people doubted us this season. We went through a lot of adversity, and adversity will tell you a lot about people."

McLemore and Travis Releford scored 11 each for the Jayhawks, while Crook finished with 13 points and T.J. Price had 12 to lead the Hilltoppers.

Since the NCAA tournament expanded to 64 teams in 1985, 16 seeds are winless against No. 1 seeds in 116 games, including Southern's heartbreaking 64-58 loss to Gonzaga on Thursday.

Earlier on Friday, No. 15 seed Florida Gulf Coast stunned second-seeded Georgetown, perhaps emboldening the Sun Belt champions. And on the same floor at the Sprint Center, 13th-seeded La Salle knocked off Kansas State and No. 12 seed Ole Miss beat fifth-seeded Wisconsin.

Alas, the undersized Hilltoppers couldn't one-up them against Kansas, allowing the Big 12 champions to reach the 30-win mark for the fourth straight season — the first time that's happened in Division I men's basketball, after Memphis was forced to vacate the 2008 season.

"They kind of surprised us with how good they are, to be honest," Withey said. "We definitely took them lightly, being a No. 1 seed. They came out and fought really hard."

Indeed, the Jayhawks spent the first half on the ropes.

Price hit an opener 3-pointer in the opening minute, George Fant was able to use his superior quickness against the bigger Withey in the paint, and the Hilltoppers — who needed four wins to capture the Sun Belt tournament title and the league's automatic bid — slowly built a 20-16 lead.

The heavily pro-Kansas crowd fell quiet, even as Bill Self turned up the volume on the sideline, laying into his team for its lethargic start.

Kansas finally pulled ahead for the first time since midway through the first half when Elijah Johnson finished off a three-point play that made it 28-27 with 90 seconds left, but a pair of baskets by Price down the stretch gave the scrappy Hilltoppers a 31-30 lead at the break.

The Jayhawks seized the lead again early in the second half when Kevin Young followed up his own miss by grabbing the rebound and throwing down a reverse jam, and then Releford scored off a nifty feed from McLemore, forcing Harper to burn a timeout.

Fant and Aleksejs Rostov both picked up their fourth fouls midway through the half, taking seats next to Harper on the Western Kentucky bench.

Aces roll past Eastern to advance in tourney

EVANSVILLE – Troy Taylor made it a point to speak up to his University of Evansville teammates before the Aces' men's basketball game on Saturday against Eastern Kentucky.

"Especially the big guys," Taylor said. "I was just like, 'From here on out, don't let anybody outtough you. Don't let anybody out-rebound you. Don't back down from nobody just because of the simple fact that when the ball goes up in the air, it's all about who wants it.' "

Evansville left little to doubt in that regard on its way to an 86-72 win over the Colonels during a second round CollegeInsider.com Tournament game.

In front of a boisterous 1,651 fans at the University of Southern Indiana's Physical Activities Center, the Aces (20-14) outrebounded EKU 41-20 and outscored the visitors by 14 points in the second half.

With the victory, Evansville's program reached 20 wins for the first time since 1999 and won two postseason games in one year for the first time since 1971, when the Aces earned their fifth College Division national championship.

It would take three more wins for coach Marty Simmons' club to notch a CIT title as Evansville moves on to the round of eight against an opponent to be named later.

Colt Ryan scored a game-high 25 points on Saturday, pulling to within eight of Larry Humes for the top spot on Evansville's all-time scoring list. He led four double-figure scorers for the Aces, and Taylor added a career-high 16 to go with sophomore Ryan Sawvell's game-high 10 rebounds.

UE took the lead for good on an alley-oop pass from Taylor and a dunk by Ned Cox with 18:11 left. The Aces went on to lead by as many as 16 points over an EKU team that finished 25-10 — the most wins in program history — and carried the best ratings percentage index (69th) into the CIT.

Junior Glenn Cosey's 18 points paced the Colonels. Sophomore Eric Stutz added 11 points and four rebounds in the Castle graduate's return to town.

'Bama ousts Stanford in NIT

The Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. – Levi Randolph scored 16 points and Retin Obasohan had a career-high 14 to lead Alabama to a 66-54 victory over Stanford on Saturday in the second round of the National Invitation Tournament.

The Crimson Tide (23-12) will play Maryland on Tuesday in the quarterfinals, hoping for its second trip to Madison Square Garden in three years.

The Cardinal (19-15), last year's NIT champion, twice closed to within four points in the second half but went 4:40 without a field goal late.

Nick Jacobs and Trevor Releford each scored 10 points for the Tide.

Chasson Randle led Stanford with 11 points while Robbie Lemons had 10. Leading scorer Dwight Powell was 1-of-6 shooting for two points. He played only 24 minutes because of foul trouble and had eight rebounds.

Hunters will encounter gobblers of all ages this season

By Art Lander Jr.
Kentucky Afield

FRANKFORT – With opening day of the statewide season just three weeks away, Kentucky turkey hunters can look forward to encountering gobblers of all ages this spring.

"There will be a higher than average number of jakes (juvenile gobblers) compared to the 2-year-olds and older adult gobblers in our flocks," said Steven Dobey, wild turkey program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "We should have another good spring season."

Youth hunters ages 15 and younger have the first opportunity to hunt spring turkeys on April 6-7.

The general season opens the following weekend, always on the Saturday closest to April 15 and lasts 23 days. This year's general season dates are April 13 through May 5.

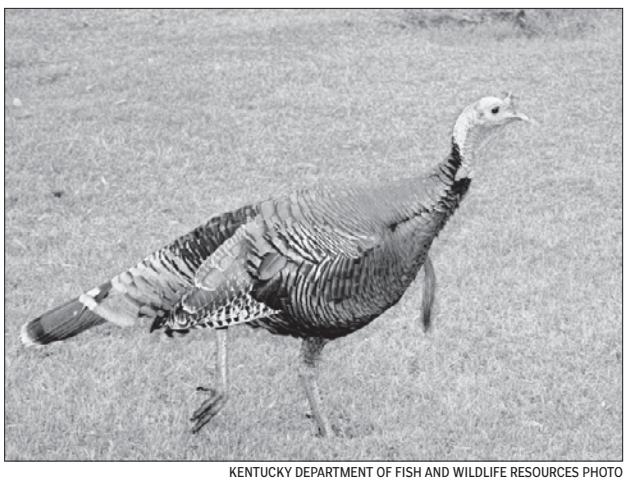
Kentucky's turkey flock is estimated to number about 250,000 birds.

"In many areas of the state, carrying capacities have been reached," said Dobey. "But there's still room for flocks to expand in eastern Kentucky, where there's available habitat and food resources. The mountain counties have good numbers of birds and fewer hunters."

During the last five seasons, hunters in Kentucky have taken on average about 31,486 birds each spring. "Kentucky ranked No. 1 among all seven surrounding states in 2012 for the number of birds taken per square mile of habitat, followed closely by Tennessee and Missouri," said Dobey.

Last spring hunters bagged 33,068 bearded turkeys, 89 percent of which had beards six inches or longer. It was the third year in a row that the harvest exceeded 30,000 birds. The record spring harvest total occurred in 2010, when hunters telechecked 36,097 birds.

Hunter success rates have remained consistent, too. "Over the past 10 years, about 35 percent of hunters have taken at least one bird during the spring season and 75 percent of our successful hunters typically telechecked one bird." said Dobey.



KENTUCKY DEPARTMENT OF FISH AND WILDLIFE RESOURCES PHOTO

Turkey season opens April 13 and closes on May 5. Hunters should encounter a mix of younger and older gobblers. Biologists estimate Kentucky's turkey flock at roughly 250,000 birds.

The bag limit for the spring season is two bearded turkeys.

Last year's drought had minimal impact on turkey reproduction since it intensified during the summer months, after nesting was completed.

"Statewide, our surveys rated nesting success as moderate to good, with 1.8 poults per hen. While I hoped to see a higher number, that was an improvement over 2011," said Dobey.

He said another indication of improved reproduction was a seven percent increase in the harvest of sub-adult male birds during the 2012 fall season.

Kentucky turkey hunters should have a productive spring season when they slip on their mesh face masks, get their slate calls scratched and ready and hit the turkey woods.

Researchers seek public's help in locating barn owl nesting locations

Special to The Gleaner

FRANKFORT – Researchers need the public's help in finding more nesting sites of Kentucky's remaining barn owls.

Barn owls, with their distinctive heart-shaped faces and dark eyes, were plentiful across Kentucky as late as the 1960s. Currently, however, there are only about 25 documented nesting locations statewide.

Wildlife biologists with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources need to locate as many barn owl nesting sites as possible to gain a deeper understanding of why this species has declined in the state.

Barn owls have gradually lost their historic nesting and foraging habitat as landowners cut down the old trees damaged by storms and converted pastures, hayfields and grasslands to row crops. Biologists, however, are looking for additional reasons for the decline. Researchers are also asking for the public to report any dead barn owls, so that specimens can be collected and examined.

Other more common owl species are often confused with barn owls. Barn owls have no ear tufts. They are a medium-sized bird, measuring 14-20 inches tall. However, they can appear larger when in flight due to their 3 1/2-foot wingspan. Barn owls have a whitish face and breast with whitish to pale cinnamon bodies. They do not hoot like some owls species. Instead, they screech and hiss, especially when approached. For more information on identifying barn owls, please see the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Web page at: http://fw.ky.gov/owlidentification.asp.

Barn owls prefer open areas such as hayfields and pasture; they are usually not found in the woods. Although they often nest in hollow trees, barn owls also regularly nest in man-made structures such as old barns, silos, grain bins, chimneys, hay lofts and attics.

Barn owls can nest yearround in Kentucky, although most of the nesting activity occurs from March through August.

For more information about barn owls in Kentucky and the research project, go online to http://fw.ky.gov/barnowls.asp.

Anyone with information about the location of a barn owl nest or a dead barn owl should contact Wildlife Biologist Kate Heyden at 1-800-858-1549, ext. 4475. Observers can also email Heyden at kathryn.heyden@ky.gov.

Barn owls are sensitive to disturbance, so if a nest is found, it's best to leave the owls be and avoid attracting attention to it.

For the protection of owls and landowners, exact nesting locations and landowner information is strictly confidential and will not be released to the public. Information provided to Kentucky Fish and Wildlife for this study is used for research purposes only.

Hunter education course set at local sportsman's club

Gleaner staff

A free hunter education course will be offered April 1 and April 2 from 6-9 p.m. and April 3 from 4:30-8 p.m. at the Sportsman's Club of Henderson County (7144 Sportsman's Club Road off 416 by the Pennyrile, exit 68, in Robards).

The 10-hour course, sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Sportsman's Club of Henderson County, will include classroom instruction in hunter ethics, wildlife conservation and identification, field care of game, outdoor survival, first aid, trapping, firearms, bow hunting, muzzleloading and ammunition.

Participants must be present all three nights. The last session will include actual range firing and examination.

Anyone 10 years old or older is welcome. Food and soft drinks will be available.

For more information contact Bob McKee at (270) 526-3023 or Robert.McKee@ky.gov.

Snow job: U.S. soccer team edges Costa Rica 1-0 in storm

By Michael Kelly
Associated Press

COMMERCE CITY, Colo. – Soft snow started falling, and then kept getting heavier as the night progressed.

From the start of Friday's World Cup qualifier, the lines on the field were covered. As the game wore on, even the Americans in their white home uniforms became hard to see.

And then in the 55th minute, with the U.S. leading Costa Rica 1-0 on Clint Dempsey's early goal, the referee and match commissioner stopped it.

Would it continue? For a moment, it was as unclear as the view. But then, after some heated discussions, play went on.

On a snowy night more suitable to slaloms than soccer, Dempsey's 16th-minute score in his first start as the American captain held up, giving the U.S. a 1-0 victory in a key qualifier for next year's World Cup.

"It was difficult out here to see anything," Dempsey said. "The second half, the snow coming up past your ankles, it was almost unplayable."

Several U.S. players wore short sleeves. A bare-chested Dempsey applauded fans after the final whistle.

Costa Rica's team seemed to have a harder time dealing with the winter wonderland. The Ticos have 24 hours to file a written protest with FIFA.

"You couldn't see the lines. You couldn't see the ball. You couldn't play," Costa Rica midfielder Michael Barrantes said.

Plows and shovels were used to clear the penalty areas, center circle and midfield stripe as snow got heavier, and a yellow-and-purple ball was used. Ten minutes into the second half, Costa Rica coach Jorge Luis Pinto wanted referee Joel Aguilar of El Salvador and match commissioner Victor Daniel of Grenada to suspend the game, but U.S. coach Jurgen Klinsmann made a case for playing on.

"That's why I went onto the field with my bad Spanish, to interfere with the referee, 'We're not stopping that game. It's only the lines,'" Klinsmann said. "They cleaned up the lines and they kept playing. The referees were clear, they said it was all about the lines. It's for both teams very difficult to play all the way through. I would have done anything possible to not stop it."

The match will be remembered in American soccer for the elements as much as the 1967 Ice Bowl is in the NFL. As the snow increased, it made the field resemble a cake topped with piles of sugar, and players' hair turned white as snow stuck along their scalps. During injury time, American defender Geoff Cameron even playfully pushed the back of a grounds crew member shoveling the field.

As the conditions deteriorated, the U.S. survived Michael Umana's apparent 70th-minute goal for Costa Rica that was disallowed for offside and came away with a red-very-white-and-blue victory.

Local church unveils recently completed murals in children's wing

At Palm Sunday services, such as those taking place all over the community today in our churches, it's common to hear the stories about Jesus as well as those of Bible characters who paved the way for his ministry.

But it's not that common to see those stories actually come to life in a very artistic and colorful way.

Today at Chapel Hill United Methodist Church, the congregation and visitors will experience that very thing as they celebrate a new series of murals painted by local artist Iris Gentry in the church's three-year-old children's wing.

Many of the church's own members have not yet seen these works of art since the wing is a secure area, but they as well as the public can do so at open houses after today's 9 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. services.

Though she's no stranger to murals, after having painted them for such places as Henderson County Public Library, Holy Name of Jesus Catholic Church and the St. Anthony's Hospice unit at Methodist Hospital, Gentry's work at Chapel Hill is her biggest project to date.

And it was a collaboration with others who had a vision for the project.

"We had ideas," said Sherry Smith, noting that they wanted to communicate a warm greeting for children as they "came to Christ" whenever they arrived at the church, "but Iris could put them all together."

"That's the way the process should work," Gentry added. "I just knew it needed to be child-friendly and colorful."

She had previously painted a scene on a rounded wall in the front entry of the wing depicting children gathered around Jesus, and that became the focal point for the rest of the project, which Gentry started well before Christmas and just recently completed.

The walls in the wing, which had been white, were prepped for Gentry's art with a color called "golden ecru" to achieve the warm look they wanted, and she went to work, incorporating the Biblical stories that the team selected to identify each age group as they grow.

Local artist Iris Gentry finishes some details on a nearly 9-foot-tall Goliath in the hallway of the children's wing at Chapel Hill United Methodist Church.

Team member Marla Owens said it had always been their plan to have an age-appropriate theme for each classroom.

"My job was to take the themes and incorporate them into the design," Gentry said, explaining how she worked her way through the stories of Noah's ark, Jonah and the whale, Moses as a baby, Daniel in the lions den, Joseph and his amazing multicolored coat, David and Goliath, Jesus feeding the 5,000 and other familiar scenes.

"When you're working on projects like this, you can only plan so far ahead, but I knew I could figure it out."

The project wasn't without its challenges, since a public building can have things like water fountains, fire alarms, kitchen cabinets and exit signs as part of the surroundings. Gentry did her best to make those very necessary items fit into the scenes.

A silver metal water fountain, for example is concealed in a huge gray boulder, and the overflow food from feeding the multitudes is stored in baskets above the kitchen cabinets.

This original mural painted by local artist Iris Gentry for the children's wing entry area at Chapel Hill became the focal point for the rest of the project.

High-traffic areas likely to get scuffed and experience extra abuse were given special treatment.

"That's part of the whole process," Gentry said, "working with the architectural features."

Then, there was the problem of Goliath.

"I needed to make him 9 feet tall, and that's as close as I could get," she said, pointing to the massive warrior facing off against the much smaller shepherd boy and his men cowering behind their shields.

But with the challenges has also come a great deal of fun.

Owens, a Sunday school teacher, said she takes a great deal of pleasure in using the murals to teach the stories of the Bible, and challenging the children to find all the small items and animals that Gentry has incorporated into the design.

If you spend enough time noticing, a person can find caterpillars and dragonflies, frogs and bunny rabbits, skunks and birds and cats, parrots and snowy owls, giraffes, roosters, mice, inchworms, butterflies, donkeys, crab, lambs and, of course, the lions in Daniel's den.

That's not even to mention all the creatures riding with Noah. The rhinoceros coming off the ark, some say, is looking you in the eye no matter which direction you come down the hall.

"I've just always liked to do things like that, especially when I've worked on something for a long time," Gentry said.

One of the other features of the design are a couple of Bible verses above the hallway windows framing an outdoor play area, perhaps expressing what the church hopes to accomplish with its inviting space for the younger generations.

"Train up a child in the way he should go," reads the verse from Proverbs 22, "and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Boy's version of Lord's Prayer takes unexpected detour

Hayden Tarter, 4-year-old son of Kenny and Brooke Tarter of Evansville and grandson of Brent and Janice Walters of Henderson, was reciting The Lord's Prayer recently to his mom, but his version came out just a little bit different in the end from what most people might be accustomed to in their weekly worship services.

The little boy ended his conversation with the Lord by saying: "... and lead us not into vacation, but deliver us from people, Amen."

A series of programs with the theme "Get Healthy, Fit and Happy" is planned for spring break week at the Henderson County Public Library.

Registration for the programs is required and will continue through this Friday.

All programs are free, and children kindergarten through fifth grade are welcome to attend. Space is limited.

Here are the details about the programs, which will take place at 1:30 p.m. daily April 2-4:

April 2: "Kids — Choose Your Plate!" with Susan Morgan from the Henderson County Cooperative Extension Service. While learning about making healthy choices, kids will be making fruit pizza.

April 3: Puppet show with Central Kentucky Kids on the Block teaching children acceptance of each other by recognizing their differences, thus enabling the audience to make safer and healthier life choices.

April 4: Zumbatomic, with Annette Garrison, a licensed Zumbatomic instructor from the Henderson County Family YMCA.

To register or for more information, visit the library's website, www.hcpl.org, stop by the library at 101 S. Main St. or call the library at 826-3712.

Befriending dumped dog turns into canine adventure for family

Penelope, who often acts as leader of the pack, peeks over the edge of the box in which the puppies are carried out into the yard.

KATHY MOORE
PET COLUMNIST

It may appear to be a case of "no good deed goes unpunished," but that's not how Shari Carter views the situation.

Just because she befriended a dumped dog that ultimately produced seven frisky puppies and hefty vet bills, Carter sees no reason to dwell on the down side.

"It's all good," she said. "I just like to look for the positive in things and can see more positive in the time Eleanor has been with us than negative."

The Henderson County resident's 13-year-old daughter Cameron has benefited from the experience and the dog now named Eleanor has been spayed and has become a permanent member of the Carter household.

That just leaves one more not-so-little task: finding caring homes for the cute, active, friendly and snugly puppies.

Two of the litter have already been spoken for, which leaves five to find homes for after they turn 6 weeks old on Monday.

"Spring break would be a good time to take a puppy," she said, noting that the puppies will be free but they must go to good, responsible homes.

The adventure started last summer when an older dog, a dachshund mix, showed up in their yard. The Carters don't live on a main roadway; in fact, they live on a rural dead-end road with large yards and fields between houses. So the dog likely didn't just get lost or wander away from home.

"She was dumped," said Carter, who is retired from the Kentucky Department of Juvenile Justice. "We tried to find out who owned her" but came up empty.

They now believe the dog is about 5 or 6 years old, but they initially thought she was more elderly since she has some gray around her muzzle.

"We thought she was really old because she acted old at first," Carter said. "She was on her best behavior."

The stray got along well with their dog, Nicki, a 2-year-old German wire-haired pointer and Labrador mix. "They play and wrestle."

Plus, daughter Cameron "fell in love with her and we decided to keep her."

They took Eleanor to be spayed, but the vet said the dog had heartworms and advised against having her spayed at that time.

"She was real timid when she came to live with us and didn't seem to be in the best physical health or have much stamina. She increasingly became stronger and more active as the result of daily walks and playing with Nicki."

What they failed to foresee, however, was that a neighbor's dog would get loose and that Eleanor would wind up pregnant before she was deemed healthy enough to be spayed.

On the night that Eleanor went into labor, she started having trouble. Carter's fiance, Jim Bakke, took Eleanor on a late-night run to the emergency vet center in Evansville, which was able to stabilize her until a cesarean section could be done by Carter's vet the next day.

"We were pretty concerned about her," Jim said, noting that too much time had gone by after the mama dog's water broke without any pups being born. Apparently the first pup had become stuck in the birth canal.

Eleanor ended up having seven healthy pups. "It was a big event," Carter said.

KATHY MOORE / THE GLEANER

Shari Carter and her fiance, Jim Bakke, hold five of the puppies that were born Feb. 11 to Eleanor, middle, a stray who showed up in Carter's neighborhood.

the pups have been good so far, too.

"She's the best dog I've ever seen; she's really good-natured," Carter said. "She has the sweetest disposition and is a good companion for Nicki."

She's also been at attentive mother to the pups, taking good care of them. "Eleanor does most of the care," leaving the humans with the routine cleanup work.

The pups haven't been a lot of trouble.

"They're good. They don't whine a lot and you can sit down and they all will fall asleep on you," Carter said.

There are two females, named Penelope and Francis, and five males, who haven't been named. Penelope seems to be the Alpha dog so far, already sticking her nose in everybody's business.

Eleanor, a stray that showed up last summer in a Henderson County neighborhood and then was adopted by Shari Carter, is surrounded by her seven puppies. Eleanor, whose spaying was delayed by a heartworm condition, gave birth to the puppies on Feb. 11.

The dad, Carter believes, is a 50-pound German wire-haired pointer and almost twice as big as Eleanor, so they don't really know how big the pups will become.

Although the family adores the pups, Carter said she resigned herself and Cameron to the fact from the start that they couldn't keep any of them. In addition to Eleanor and Nicki, they also have a 9-year-old cat named Princess, so the believes that's enough pets.

They will miss the puppies, she said, but permanent homes must be found.

"As long as I know they're going to a good home, I don't mind," she said, noting that at least two of them will be with friends where she might be able to visit them or at least hear updates. "It will help to see how they're doing."

All in all, Carter chalks up the entire Eleanor ordeal as a good one, teaching all of them lessons along the way.

"It's been a good experience for Cameron," Jim said, as the North seventh-grader got to see Eleanor's pregnancy progress up to the time of the birth. Although the young teen wasn't able to witness the C-section at the vet's office, she got to see the puppies the next day and "she's helped feed and care for them," Jim said.

"I think it's good for kids to experience this," Carter said, noting that the family has enjoyed "the whole experience of new life and watching/interacting with sweet little puppies."

It's important that the people who agree to adopt the puppies are dedicated to making a comfortable, forever home for them, she said.

"We want families that are in it for the long haul," Carter said. "Puppies/dogs take a lot time, patience and expense. I'd hate for one of them to dropped off somewhere because the owner lacked the commitment. We have taken very good care of the pups and want their future owners to do the same."

Anyone interested in adopting a puppy should call Jim at 748-1425.

Scarlet, a 2-year-old calico cat, is available for adoption from the Humane Society of Henderson County.

Scarlet's life hasn't always been as pretty as she is.

The 2-year-old calico who has been at the Humane Society of Henderson County shelter since last September "led a very neglected life up until her arrival here," said rescue coordinator Misti Payne. "She is still on the slender side, but she has gained a tremendous amount of weight and is growing her hair back beautifully."

The shy kitty would probably do best in a home with older children or none at all, Payne said.

"She is very sweet and loving but would prefer a quiet home."

The adoption fee for Scarlet, who has already been spayed, is $50.

A much more outgoing and energetic shelter resident is Blu, a 10-month-old Labrador-heeler mix.

Blu would fit well into an active family where regular physical activity is common. "She has lots of puppy energy and would love a home with a large fenced yard and lot of toys," Payne said.

The friendly pup has been at the shelter since Feb. 1 and has already been spayed.

"She will also love lots of walks around the neighborhood or park and a house full of children to play with," Payne added.

Blu's adoption fee is $85.

Adoption hours at the shelter are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays; 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesdays; noon to 5 p.m. Wednesdays; and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays. For more information, contact the Humane Society of Henderson County at 826-8966.

Spring cleaning excitement can fade away very quickly

By Rosemary Sadez Friedmann
Scripps Howard News Service

Has spring sprung yet? Well, it is coming soon, anyway, and that means spring cleaning.

It always seems exciting to get things started, then part way through the cleaning the excitement fades and the reality of the work sets in, but the finished result always makes all the labor worthwhile. But what really needs sprucing up — and what can wait another year? Let's check it out.

Is it time to replace some older, dilapidating things with newer and more efficient things? Let's start with the roof. Climb up a ladder (be careful!) or get binoculars and go across the street to view your roof.

Are there missing or broken tiles or shingles? Replacing the roof is expensive, but not as expensive as replacing many more things in your house if the roof leaks or there is a storm that rips off some of the roofing.

Some roofing products come with an insurance discount. For example, if you live on the West Coast and you replace a cedar roof with a fire-resistant roof, you probably will be able to get a homeowner's-insurance discount.

How about the windows? If you see condensation between the glass panes or your windows are hard to open or close, your energy bills are going to be higher than they should be. It might be time to replace the windows. OK, so this is another expensive endeavor, but worth the price in the long run.

The front door should be in good and attractive condition. When you are inside the house looking at the closed front door, do you see light peaking in around the door? Do you feel a cold draft coming in when you stand close to the door?

Is the door hard to close or lock? It's time for a new door if the answer is yes to any of these questions.

Again, your energy bill will be a bit more palatable if you have a well-sealed front door. And a nice and clean front door makes your home more inviting and attractive.

How are the floors? Is it time for new carpet? Sometimes replacing the carpet in the most-used room is all you need.

Carpeting isn't cheap, so a thought might be to replace the most-used room's carpet first with the plan of replacing other rooms in a year or so. If you have wood, tile or marble flooring, getting a professional company to refurbish is a good idea.

Sometimes furniture needs to be reupholstered, other times buying new is better. Reupholstering is a good choice if the furniture you have is of good quality, you like it very much and it is comfortable.

But buying new is another good choice, too, because reupholstering can be as expensive as buying new. Weigh the difference and decide: new or reupholstered.

Appliances are another spring-cleaning issue. Energy-saving appliances are available everywhere, so evaluate what you have and replace any inefficient appliances you own with new energy-efficient models.

Ferns, ribbons, trellises make your decorating projects better

By Mary Carol Garrity
Scripps Howard News Service

As soon as my holiday décor is boxed up and stored away, I'm ready for spring. Since spring officially started last week, I know exactly how I want to decorate my home to celebrate this season of fresh new beginnings.

This year, I've zeroed in on five gotta-have tools that I'm going to use to create sensational spring displays.

1. Ferns: Ferns are woodsy and wonderful and lush and a bit lascivious. Since I am the angel of death when it comes to houseplants, I buy fakes to tuck into existing displays on my mantel or in bookcases.

This year, I'm going to expand my tribute to ferns and use them outside. There is no easier way to do so than with a simple fern wreath. Wreaths are among the very best quick-and-dirty decorating tools you'll find because they give you a big look with almost no effort.

Outside, hang a wreath from the front door and — snap! -- it's decorated. Place it atop those empty urns by your front door or that birdbath in your garden, then fill in the center with moss balls or a silver gazing ball. Presto: You have a lovely, lively, fresh display in seconds.

2. Colorful ribbons: Decorative ribbons give you a chance to instantly infuse décor with seasonal colors, patterns and images.

Want to give guests thrills and chills? Hang things from the ceiling. It's unexpected and daring and super-easy to do with a few spools of spring ribbon. Use a mix of colored ribbons to tie up some moss balls or faux spring birds' nests and hang them at different lengths from the arms of a chandelier.

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE

These colorful pieces on the mantel are so interchangeable you can mix and match them in many different ways, giving your spaces a constant facelift.

Or, arrange some fallen branches in an urn and hang the balls from the sticks. If you really want to go for it, secure branches or garland around interior doorways or from the ceiling and dangle delightful things from the branches using spring ribbon.

3. Trellises: Bring the garden in by using a few trellises in interior displays.

Here's a fast-and-easy look I love: Take a garden urn or a large cachepot, then wedge in a small wire trellis, letting it rest on the bottom so it's secure. Then weave in a few natural-looking vines. Or toss an assortment of mass balls into the center of the trellis.

If you're entertaining this spring and want a table that's to die for, use some trellises in your centerpiece. Trellises are a fabulous pick for tabletops because they give the dramatic height you need to make a statement yet don't take over because they are thin and airy and see-through.

4. Pottery: Designers keep coming up with new looks for accent pottery, and I keep falling in love with them. Pottery is also super-affordable, so if you want to give your home a B-12 shot you can do so on a budg et by getting a trio of colorful pots.

When you create a display using several pieces of pottery, don't treat an accent lamp like an outsider. Instead, try building the display around the lamp. Have any majolica plates or platters? Prop them in an easel and work them in with bright pottery.

5. Fabrics: A couple of yards of killer fabric can take you a lot of places. One of my favorite places to use spring fabric is on my dining table.

Get a yard or two of spring stripe, floral or check. Then stitch (or iron on, if you're like me and don't sew) a quick hem to create a table runner or a table square that can serve as the base of a centerpiece.

Remake the look of a living-room sofa or bedding with a few new accent pillows in peppy spring trellis, chevron or floral patterns. It's a little splash that will make all the difference in a room.

It's time to firm up plans for new gardening season

By Joe Lamp'l
Scripps Howard News Service

For many gardening enthusiasts, this time around late winter and early spring requires a lot of self-control.

We've been cooped up for months, unable to get our hands in the dirt, while attempting to appease our earthly desires through gardening catalogs, flower shows and plenty of daydreaming.

By now, we've just about had it with ideas, and it's time to put them into action. But for many, those moments are short-lived.

Before we can garner any real momentum, Mother Nature reminds us that she's still in control by following up those warm weather samplings with cold snaps in quick succession.

With self-restraint made possible only through years of feeling the painful consequences of my impulsive desire to beat the system, I wait a little longer.

So what's in store for my garden this season? With a new, five-acre property before me, I am giddy with anticipation.

Our frost-free date is still over a month away, but there is plenty to do before then and even more beyond that.

For now, it's all about the site prep, as it should be for any gardener or weekend warrior who desires to create the best environment for long-term success.

As long as the ground isn't frozen or saturated, it's the perfect time to cultivate and clean up.

Preparation of the planting beds and future lawn area reigns supreme for this property over the next few weeks.

Weeding, contouring and a generous layer of topsoil worked lightly into the earth should serve my future plants and seedbed well.

For the beds waiting to receive plants, I'll top them off with several inches of mulch, as a green way to suppress weeds and prevent otherwise exposed soil from crusting over.

Once my plants are in the ground, that same mulch will suppress certain plant diseases, keep roots cool and retain vital moisture in the soil.

As much as I enjoy everything to do with preparing the site and planting beds, the real fun begins in a couple weeks as I finally build the vegetable garden I've dreamed about for years.

I have a large plot of land that basks in the light of full sun all day. It is just asking to have a big garden on this spot, and I shall oblige.

No matter what you're growing, I think one of the best parts of spring comes when you put those new plants into the garden for the first time.

Truth be told, I likely won't wait to plant my new beds until after the last risk of frost has passed (do as I say, not as I do).

The seedlings I've started indoors are abundant and plentiful. Should my early crop of planted seedlings prove to be premature, my backup supply will come in handy.

Seeds are cheap and it's always nice to have more than you need just in case or to share with others.

As you can see, I have plenty to do before the real gardening begins.

Sharing future plans as well as past experiences between gardeners is part of the fun, and it's one more way we can all become better gardeners. I'll keep you posted on my progress this spring and beyond.

Open sight lines make plan good one for young family

Special to The Gleaner

An efficient, open-design kitchen with views of the front and backyards is at the heart of the Danbury, a compact home rich in popular amenities.

Gazing across the kitchen sink and through the spacious eating nook, you can see who's coming up the front driveway.

A few steps in the opposite direction puts you in front of a range and oven that are built into an eating bar.

Facing this direction allows you to look through the windows of the dining room and great room at the rear of the home.

Parents with young children will appreciate being able to keep an eye on them when they're outside.

Utilities are equally convenient to the kitchen, bedrooms and garage, and a large walk-in pantry is also close by.

A fireplace, tucked into a corner of the great room, provides warmth and charm.

The owners' suite has an exceptionally large walk-in closet for a home of this size and a luxurious private bathroom with oversize spa tub and twin vanities.

A high window over the tub brightens the area. Water closet and shower are separately enclosed for added privacy.

Two more bedrooms are on the other side of the home.

MILESTONES

Engagements

Davis-Sights

Starr Davis of Morganfield and Nick Sights of Smith Mills are engaged to be married April 20.

She is the daughter of Karen Wallace of Rancho Mirage, Calif., and Bobby Davis of Morganfield, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Sights of Smith Mills.

Miss Davis is a graduate of Union County High School and is employed by Keystone Automotive.

Her fiance is a graduate of Henderson County High School and is employed by Brenntag Chemical Corp.

The wedding has been planned for 6 p.m. April 20 at St. Ann Catholic Church in Morganfield. Invitations are being sent.

Anniversaries

Nash 30th

Joey and Sue Nash of Henderson will celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary on Monday.

The couple were married March 25, 1983. The Rev. Anthony Brooks officiated.

They are the parents of two children: Trisha Priest and Jessica Nash, both of Henderson.

They also have five grandchildren.

Births

Lofton Thomas Forker

Kale and Dawn Forker of Robards are the parents of a son, Lofton Thomas, born Jan. 17 at Deaconess Women's Hospital in Newburgh.

Mrs. Forker is the former Dawn Cavanah.

The baby has one sibling: Mary Claire, 3.

Grandparents are John Cavanah and Shelley Newman of Henderson and Robert and Cheryl Forker of Sebree.

Policy

The Gleaner's deadline for submitting weddings, engagements, anniversaries and birth announcements is no later than NOON on Tuesday before the Sunday of publication.

Parents may submit a birth announcement by filling out a form at The Gleaner office, 455 Klutey Park Plaza, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, or a form can be requested by fax or mail.

Announcements can also be emailed to features@thegleaner.com. The deadline is noon Tuesday for Sunday publication.

We publish engagement and wedding announcements one time and once a week in the Sunday edition.

There is no charge for this service, but there are some rules:

Wedding accounts should appear in the newspaper within 12 weeks after the date of the wedding.

Forms outlining the information that can be used in the announcements are available at the newspaper office during regular business hours or the form can be mailed or faxed to you.

Forms are also available at www.thegleaner.com.

The announcements can include a photograph of the bride, bride-to-be or of the couple.

The Gleaner does not publish wedding announcements in the Sunday edition immediately following a Friday or Saturday wedding.

Task vs. project

■ Organizing home chores helps get them done

By Sarah Welch

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE ILLUSTRATION

The problem with organizational projects is, life is always moving — and if you're not careful the clutter can creep back in.

Chances are, if you've got a to-do that's been lingering far too long on your lists, it's a project, not a to-do.

When I do the one-on-one coaching calls, I never cease to be amazed at just how universal the confusion between to-dos and projects is.

Let's define the terms.

PROJECT:

A project is a temporary undertaking, with a clear beginning and end designed to accomplish something specific.

A project can be something you create from scratch or a major change to an existing system or just digging out from under a huge mess.

It requires effort in terms of definition, planning and delivery. A good rule of thumb: A project is anything you're committed to finish in a year that requires more than one action to complete.

TASK:

A task is a small activity that will contribute to a project's completion or simply a routine step.

A task can be done relatively quickly, often in 30 minutes.

When a to-do item lingers on and on, a few things happen, none of them good.

You start to feel stressed that your list is never-ending and, worse, that you're not accomplishing anything, or at least not as much as you should.

You carry a low-level anxiety with you that something is falling through the cracks.

You undermine your own self-trust each time you fail to get to something you've told yourself you would get to.

All of these things put dents in your organizational identity.

When you believe you are a failure at anything, you're less likely to take the steps you need to get better in that area, which in turn will yield poor results, which reinforce your belief that you're a failure.

The beauty is, you can avoid this doom loop altogether just by understanding the distinction between a project and a task.

Once you recognize that something on your list is a project, it's time to do a little planning.

Step 1: Define your project

This is an often-skipped step, and yet it's crucial. The point of this step is to get very clear on what your desired outcome is.

Do you really just want to detox a room, or do you also want to put some systems in place so that it doesn't keep piling up with junk?

Step 2: Map it out

This, too, is a crucial, but frequently skipped step. In this step, you do the mental heavy lifting. First think about how this big project can break down into smaller chunks, or milestones.

If you have an office that you can't see the bottom of, break the big picture (the office) into zones. Then for each zone, identify the tasks you need to do to get the zone cleared up.

Then, assign deadlines and make appointments on your calendar to complete the tasks. If it's not scheduled, it won't get done.

This is also where you sit down, think about what problems might crop up and create a game plan on what you'll do if those problems arise.

Step 3: Execute

Or ... in the immortal words of Tow Mater (a/k/a Larry the Cable Guy): Get 'er done!

Step 4: Celebrate (and set yourself up so it stays done)

Take a moment to establish thresholds or routines to ensure your project stays done for the long haul.

The problem with organizational projects is that life is always moving, and if you're not careful the clutter can creep back in.

A threshold is a parameter that serves as a trigger for you to do an immediate, small cleanup.

For example, I have a threshold established that a piece of clothing cannot remain on the floor of my closet for more than one day. If it does, I compel myself to clean it up.

A routine is a series of steps that you take on a regular basis to keep the chaos at bay.

For example, every Friday afternoon at 4:45, I stop what I'm doing and clean up my desk at work for 15 minutes.

Co-workers don't have to be asked to wedding

CARLY RONEY
COLUMNIST

Q: I'm not very close to any of my co-workers. Do I have to invite them to my wedding?

A: There's no rule that says everyone — or anyone, in fact — you work with has to be invited to your wedding. It's up to you. If you're not close to your co-workers, don't invite them. Period.

If anyone from the office asks about the wedding, give the person the line you're giving everyone else who isn't invited: "We're keeping the wedding really intimate, only close friends and family."

But if any uninvited co-workers give you a wedding gift, be gracious and send a thank-you note, like you would with any other gift.

‘Sum It Up’ takes look at Summitt’s 38 years as UT coach

Special to The Gleaner

A new book about the University of Tennessee’s former women’s basketball coach Pat Summitt is new on the shelves at the Henderson County Public Library.

The book takes a look at how Summitt became the all-time winningest coach in NCAA basketball history and how her personal life played a role in her coaching ability during her 38 years at UT.

Here are details about “Sum It Up” and also about other new books at the library.

FICTION

“Black Irish” by Stephen Talty — Even after Abbie graduated from Harvard and became a detective, she still was unable to shake the misfit label in South Buffalo. When a body is found, Abbie’s investigation is stonewalled by the community and fellow cops, until she catches a break at the Gaelic Club. Abbie goes to great lengths to track down the killer, even if it means delving into her own family’s past.

At the library

“Little Known Facts” by Christine Sneed — Renn Ivins is an actor of great fame, but it is celebrity that causes those around him to suffer by being seen as unimportant extensions of Renn. Renn’s children Anna and Will are grown and struggling to become authentic versions of themselves. Those around Renn feel the burden of fame and fortune, but they also cannot ignore the celebrity that is always in their company.

“Wash” by Margaret Wrinkle — In Tennessee during the early 1800s, two men find themselves in the midst of a power struggle. Richardson is a slave-owning Revolutionary War veteran who is struggling to keep his wealth and status. Washington is a young man who is owned by Richardson and is sent out by his master to be a stud for other farm owners. But it is Wash and those who cross his path that establish a life that is spiritually more rewarding and fulfilling than his master’s life.

NON-FICTION

“Alone on the Ice: The Greatest Survival Story in the History of Exploration” by David Roberts — Roberts tells of the unbelievable accounts of Australian Douglas Mawson, one of the world’s greatest polar explorers. Whether he found himself dangling over an abyss or crawling back to base camp due to the soles of his feet being detached from his flesh, Mawson always found a way back to base with memories of incredible journeys.

“Sum It Up: A Thousand and Ninety-eight Victories, a Couple Irrelevant Losses, and a Life in Perspective” by Pat Summitt —

Pat Summitt was 21 years old when she became the head coach of the Tennessee Lady Vols. She has won more basketball games than any other NCAA coach in the country. She was taught by life experiences to not only be tough, but to balance that toughness with compassion. In 2011, Summitt was diagnosed with early-onset Alzheimer’s disease and has subsequently retired from coaching.

HOURS, BOOKMOBILE

The Henderson County Public Library’s hours are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Tuesday: Haven Christian Academy, 9:15-10:10 a.m.; Kids Time Daycare, 10:15-10:45 a.m.; Eastland Terrace Apartments, 11:15-11:45 a.m.; Colonial Assisted Living, 1:30-2:30 p.m.; Fagan Square, 4-4:30 p.m.

Wednesday: Elmwood Drive, 9:30-10 a.m.; Henderson Nursing and Rehab, 10:30-11:30 a.m.; Redbanks Towers, 1-2:30 p.m.; 840 N. Adams St.; 3-3:30 p.m.; Morning Dove Court, 4-4:30 p.m.

Thursday: Redbanks nursing home, 10:30-11 a.m.; Regency Apartments, 11:05-11:35 a.m.; Pleasant Pointe Apartments, 1-2:30 p.m.; Henderson Manor, 3:15-4 p.m.

What Henderson is reading ...

Here is a list of the most-requested books last week at the Henderson County Public Library. The list includes already released books as well as books that are about to be released and are on order.

1. “Untitled Thriller” by John Grisham
2. “King and Maxwell” by David Baldacci
3. “Whiskey Beach” by Nora Roberts
4. “Alex Cross, Run” by James Patterson
5. “Cross My Heart” by James Patterson
6. “Gone” by James Patterson
7. “Until the End of Time” by Danielle Steel
8. “Confessions of a Murder Suspect 2” by James Patterson
9. “Rocky Mountain Angel” by Vivian Arend
10. “Silencing Eve” by Iris Johansen

Singer from Train spotted in ‘Hawaii Five-O’ episode

By Rob Owen
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Q: On a recent “Hawaii Five-0,” I could swear that the bad guy was played by Pat Monahan from Train. I could not see the credits; they were too small. If it wasn’t him, it was his twin. Can you find this out for us?

— Carol, 58, Castle Shannon, Pa.

Rob Owen: Carol is correct. According to CBS’s description, Pat Monahan from Train did appear in the Feb. 18 episode.

Q: I really enjoy the show “Vegas” on CBS. I think it has a great cast and great writing. It consistently wins the 10 p.m. ET time slot in total viewers (10 million to 11 million), but does not always win the 18-49 demographic.

I read that CBS will most likely cancel it even though 11 million viewers is a number most shows don’t even get close to. What are its chances of survival? Is there anything viewers can do to save the show? Why is the 18-49 demographic so important?

— Amy, 38, Allison Park, Pa.

Q: Is “Vegas” canceled, or being moved on the schedule?

— Char, 74, Sewickley, Pa.

Rob: “Vegas” has not been canceled, but it has been shunted off to 9 p.m. Friday. It will return to the air on April 5.

Amy is correct that “Vegas” is in danger of cancellation because, like NBC’s “Harry’s Law” last season, it skews old. Not enough young people are watching.

Why does that matter? Because networks cater to advertisers and advertisers function under the belief that young people’s brand preferences are not set but older viewers are and that makes older viewers less persuadable by their commercials.

Q: Does AMC have plans to re-air the first half of season five of “Breaking Bad” before airing the final episodes this summer? If not, is it available to watch anywhere besides iTunes?

— David, 48, Bridgeville, Pa.

Rob: These episodes are actually re-airing now at 4:30 a.m. Mondays, although an AMC publicist says they’re likely to re-air at a more sane hour closer to when the new episodes premiere this summer (but no date for that has been set).

A check of our online listings (http://affiliate.zap2it.com/tv/breakingbad/EP01009396) also shows that the entire series is re-airing from the beginning on AMC sister-channel Sundance, with episodes at 11 p.m. Monday and midnight Tuesday.

Q: Is “Battlestar Galactica: Blood & Chrome” more than just a one-episode pilot? Really nice premise. I would say it has promise — much better than “Caprica,” which was a mistake.

Do folks on your side of the business get dates as to when shows like “Mad Men” Season 5 and “Walking Dead” Season 3 will be available on Netflix?

One last question: Is “Defiance” not the biggest “Firefly” rip-off ever?

— Tom, 47, Upper St. Clair, Pa.

Rob: At the moment, there are no plans for future episodes.

Netflix has just recently begun sending me notices about the availability of upcoming titles (usually one or two months before the streaming release date), but there’s no public forum where these dates are posted.

I have not yet seen “Defiance,” so I cannot judge it in comparison to “Firefly.”

Q: Just wondering if you were surprised by what seemed like a somewhat unexpected cancellation of “Drop Dead Diva.”

I seem to remember hearing it was an expensive show to produce, but it seems a shame it was canceled so abruptly with no thought to resolving the storylines. Any rumblings about it being picked up somewhere else?

— Cynthia, 51, McCandless, Pa.

Rob: Lifetime and Sony, which produces the show, came to an agreement a few weeks ago, so “Diva” will return to Lifetime with new episodes later this year.

Easter lamb dish cuts fat, but keeps meat's juicy flavor

By Sara Moulton
Associated Press

I love lamb, in every way and every cut. But I don't eat it very often because of the same thing that tends to make it so very delicious — its fattiness.

Still, all bets are off during Easter, when I happily bow to tradition. In Easters past, I've roasted a whole leg of lamb or part of a leg and prepared it in a Mediterranean fashion.

Trouble is, there's always so much left over. So this year I'm going with smaller lamb steaks that are cut from the leg, one of the leanest cuts of lamb (especially if you also trim away any fat).

In fact, the leg is so lean you have to figure out how to replace the flavor and moisture that goes missing when you kiss the fat goodbye.

In this recipe, that is accomplished with a rosemary-garlic rub with added salt. When you rub a piece of protein with salt and let it sit, the salt eventually makes the meat juicier. It works like a brine, minus the liquid.

Having chosen a lean cut of meat, I also wanted a lean way to cook it. Grilling fit the bill. The problem is that grills are banned here in New York City. And elsewhere in the country, many people still haven't hauled their grills out of storage for the season yet.

The solution is a grill pan. In my opinion, every home should have one. Grilling done properly — that is, as long as you don't incinerate the ingredient in question — is a healthy way to coax flavor out of meats and vegetables, not least because it requires very little fat.

Grilled marinated lamb all by itself is pretty darn tasty, but I wanted to gild the lily a bit. After all, it is Easter.

Since I already was giving the lamb the Mediterranean treatment with a rosemary-garlic rub, I thought why not top it with an egg-lemon sauce, a stalwart of the Greek culinary repertoire?

But egg-lemon sauces can be tricky because the sauce is thickened only by the egg. If you don't cook it enough, the sauce won't thicken. If you cook it too much, the eggs scramble.

So I stabilized the sauce by adding cornstarch, which makes it creamy and curd-less, and allowed me to keep it hot over low heat without any worries.

I finished the sauce with chopped baby artichokes since artichokes and lemon are such a happy pair. I like frozen artichokes because unlike the canned or bottled varieties, there's no salt or oil added to them.

Then I caramelized them under the broiler for a few minutes to concentrate their flavor. Of course, if you have the time and inclination to prep and cook fresh baby artichokes, please go ahead. You can poach them in acidulated water until tender, then add them to the sauce.

How to serve this dish? One of our problems these days is what is delicately referred to as portion control. Less delicately, we eat too much.

My strategy is to present protein on a plate so that it looks plentiful, even though the portion isn't huge. In this case, 4 ounces of sliced steak, fanned out a bit, looks like more than 4 ounces of an unsliced steak.

Just be sure to let the steaks rest before you slice them so that they're nice and juicy. And remember to add the juice from the plate with the resting lamb to the sauce, which will marry the two.

See for yourself; it's a happy marriage. Every bite's a winner.

GRILLED LAMB STEAKS WITH ARTICHOKE LEMON SAUCE

Start to finish: 1 hour 40 minutes (20 minutes active)
Servings: 4

INGREDIENTS

- 3 tablespoons finely chopped fresh rosemary leaves, divided
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- Kosher salt and ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon plus 2 teaspoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 1 pound lamb steaks cut from the leg (preferably about ¾-inch thick)
- 1 cup artichoke hearts, patted dry and chopped (frozen is best)
- 1 cup low-sodium chicken broth
- 1 large egg yolk
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch

DIRECTIONS

1. Set aside 1 teaspoon of the chopped rosemary. In a wide, shallow bowl combine the remaining rosemary, the garlic, ½ teaspoon of salt and 1 tablespoon of the olive oil. Add the lamb and coat it well on all sides with the herb mixture. Cover and chill for at least 1 hour, and up to overnight.
2. Set an oven rack 4 inches from the broiler heating element. Heat the oven to broil.
3. In a small bowl, toss the artichokes with the remaining 2 teaspoons of oil and salt and pepper to taste. Arrange the artichokes in a single layer on a rimmed baking sheet. Broil, turning them several times, until they are golden around the edges, about 3 to 4 minutes. Remove the pan from the broiler and set aside.
4. In a small saucepan over medium, heat the chicken broth until it is simmering. In a small bowl whisk together the egg yolk, lemon juice, reserved teaspoon of rosemary and the cornstarch. Add a little of the chicken stock to the mixture in a stream, whisking. Add the egg mixture back to the chicken stock and cook for 1 minute, or until the sauce starts to bubble. Season with salt and pepper, then stir in the artichokes. Keep warm over low heat.
5. Heat a grill or a grill pan over medium-high heat. Wipe off most of the garlic herb mixture from the lamb and spray the meat with olive oil cooking spray. Add the lamb to the grill pan. Reduce the heat to medium and cook, turning once, about 4 minutes per side for medium-rare. Transfer the lamb to a plate, cover loosely with foil and let rest for 5 minutes.
6. Slice the lamb against the grain into slices about ¼-inch thick. Add the lamb juices from the plate to the artichoke lemon sauce. Divide the sliced lamb between 4 serving plates and spoon sauce over each plate.

Delicate, lemony cookies set mood for holiday

By Elizabeth Karmel
Associated Press

For most people, Easter means it's time for chocolate bunnies and colored eggs.

And while those things are fine, for me this season is about all things lemon.

I usually make lemon bars that are tart and refreshing, more lemon than egg.

But this year I decided to riff on one of my favorite cookies, the Mexican wedding cookie, also known as the Russian tea cake, pecan butterballs, snowballs, and many other names. Regardless of what you call them, these much-loved powdered sugar-coated cookies tend to be made mostly around the Christmas holidays.

But the delicious simplicity of these treats begs for a burst of lemon, and by adding a healthy dose of lemon zest, these nutty shortbread-like cookies become a "lemon wedding cookie." The zest adds a delicate lemon flavor that I find is a perfect balance to the richness of the butter and the pecans.

If you want an even bigger burst of lemon, you can add a ½ teaspoon of lemon extract to the dough and 1 teaspoon of unsweetened lemon-aid mix to the powdered sugar used to coat the cookies.

You also can add a drop or two of yellow food coloring to make the cookies yellow and more in keeping with Easter colors. If you make them small

FOUR-CHEESE SCALLOPED POTATOES

Total time: 50 minutes
Prep time: 20 minutes
Cook time: 30 minutes
Serves: 6-8

INGREDIENTS

- 1½ tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into pieces, plus more for brushing
- ½ clove garlic
- ⅓ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
- ⅓ cup shredded Asiago cheese
- ⅓ cup shredded comte or Gruyere cheese
- 2 pounds russet potatoes, peeled and sliced ⅛ inch thick
- Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper
- 2 cups heavy cream
- ¼ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
- 4 fresh bay leaves
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

DIRECTIONS

1. Position a rack in the upper third of the oven and preheat to 425 degrees F. Generously brush a large skillet with butter, then rub with the garlic. Combine the mozzarella, asiago and raclette in a bowl.
2. Heat the skillet over medium-high heat. Add half of the potatoes, spreading them out. Sprinkle with ¾ teaspoon salt, half of the cutup butter, half of the shredded cheese blend, and pepper to taste. Arrange the remaining potatoes on top. Sprinkle with ¾ teaspoon salt, and pepper to taste. Pour the cream over the potatoes, then add the nutmeg and bay leaves; simmer 3 minutes. Dot the potatoes with the remaining cutup butter.
3. Generously brush a shallow baking dish with butter; slide the potatoes into the dish; arrange with a fork, if desired. (If your skillet is ovenproof, you can skip this step and bake the potatoes in the skillet.)
4. Sprinkle the potatoes with the Parmesan and the remaining shredded cheese blend. Bake until golden, about 25 minutes. Let rest 5 minutes before serving. Discard the bay leaves.

HONEY GLAZED CARROTS

Total time: 15 minutes
Prep time: 5 minutes
Cook time: 10 minutes
Serves: 4

INGREDIENTS

- Salt
- 1 pound baby carrots
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- Freshly ground black pepper
- ¼ cup chopped flat-leaf parsley

DIRECTIONS

1. In a medium saucepan, bring water to a boil. Add salt and then carrots and cook until tender, 5 to 6 minutes.
2. Drain the carrots and add back to pan with butter, honey and lemon juice. Cook until a glaze coats the carrots, 5 minutes. Season with salt and pepper and garnish with parsley.

CREAMY SPRING PEAS WITH PANCETTA

Total time: 30 minutes
Prep time: 5 minutes
Cook time: 25 minutes
Serves: 6-8

INGREDIENTS

- Kosher salt
- 2 cups shelled fresh English peas or thawed frozen peas (about 10 ounces)
- 1 pound sugar snap peas, trimmed
- ¼ pound snow peas, trimmed and thinly sliced
- 4 ounces pancetta, chopped
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1½ cups low-sodium chicken broth
- ½ cup heavy cream
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Freshly ground pepper

DIRECTIONS

1. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil over high heat. Fill a large bowl with ice water. If using fresh English peas, add to the boiling water and cook until tender, about 1 minute. Add the snap peas and cook until bright green, about 2 minutes, then add the snow peas and cook 30 seconds. Drain the peas and plunge into the ice water to cool.
2. Cook the pancetta in a large skillet over medium heat until crisp, 8 to 10 minutes. Transfer to a paper towel-lined plate with a slotted spoon. Add the flour to the drippings in the skillet and cook, whisking, until toasted, about 1 minute. Whisk in the chicken broth and cream and cook until reduced by one-third, about 6 minutes.
3. Drain the peas, shaking off the excess water, then add to the skillet (if using frozen peas, add them here). Cook, stirring, until heated through, 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in the lemon juice and season with salt and pepper. Transfer to a serving bowl and top with the pancetta.

Observe food safety rules when dyeing, hiding Easter eggs

AMANDA HARDY

COLUMNIST

Many people will be dyeing eggs and hiding them for children to find in the next week.

When using real eggs, food safety comes to mind and you really want to make sure they are safe to eat. It probably is a good idea to throw away the eggs that you find when hunting them.

Keep fresh eggs refrigerated until it is time to cook them. Eggs are a potentially hazardous food, in the same category as meat, poultry, fish and milk. In other words, they can have the rapid growth of disease-causing bacteria like salmonella.

The American Egg Board recommends this method for boiling perfect Easter eggs: Place eggs in a single layer in saucepan.

Add enough tap water to come at least 1 inch above eggs. A tablespoon of vinegar can be added to the water to allow better dye coverage after cooking.

Cover pan and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand, covered, in the hot water for 15 minutes.

Immediately run cold water over eggs or place them in ice water until completely cooled. Refrigerate all hard-cooked eggs. Whatever the style of preparation, eggs should always be cooked well.

The Food and Drug Administration recommends cooking eggs until both the yolk and the white are firm, not runny. This way any salmonella or other harmful bacteria that may be in the eggs will be destroyed.

You don't want to handle eggs excessively. Make sure you wash your hands thoroughly when you do handle them, whether in cooking, cooling, dyeing or hiding.

The shell of an egg is very porous and will permit bacteria to penetrate. Most commercial egg producers lightly coat their eggs with a thin spray coating of mineral oil to close the pores against contamination.

Cooking the egg in the shell, however, removes that barrier so that your hard-cooked eggs are again prone to contamination unless you protect them by proper handling.

When hiding eggs, avoid areas where the eggs might come into contact with pets, wild animals, birds, reptiles, insects or chemicals.

Cooked eggs should not sit out for more than two hours and must be kept refrigerated. Stored this way they may be kept for up to one week.

Since you don't really know what bacteria the eggs have come in contact with when used for hiding, you are better off using them just for hiding and hunting; then throw them away. However, you can dye eggs, keep them properly stored and have a nice treat.

Easy-to-make tarts option for Easter Day dinner menu

Creamy Lemon-Berry Tartlets can be made with purchased lemon curd and phyllo shells.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mini cheese quiches barely require a recipe. Just fill mini phyllo cups with chopped meats, vegetables and cheese and fill with a mixture of beaten egg thinned with a little milk.

By J.M. Hirsch
AP food editor

Easter dinner isn't generally the sort of meal we try to rush. The whole point is to savor the meal, not sprint through it the way we do most weeknights.

But that doesn't mean we don't appreciate the easy, timesaving trick here and there. In this case, I've applied the same technique to both the appetizer and the dessert.

It's an approach that frees me up to focus on the rest of the meal — the all-important glazed ham, the roasted vegetables, perhaps a cocktail (or three).

The trick begins with purchased frozen phyllo pastry cups (also called "fillo shells"). You'll find them in the grocer's freezer section alongside the puff pastry (and often near the frozen fruit).

These tiny cups (each holds about 1 tablespoon or so of fillings and they usually come 15 to a box) come fully cooked and thaw in minutes. All you need to do is fill them and eat them (though you may need to bake them depending on your filling).

For the appetizer, we don't even need a recipe. All I do is transform the classic Easter quiche into bite-size treats.

To do this, heat the oven to 400 F. Coat a rimmed baking sheet with cooking spray, then arrange the phyllo cups on it. Fill each cup with a small amount (about 1 to 2 teaspoons) of fillings. Chopped cooked meats, chopped vegetables and shredded cheese are great choices.

In a 1-cup liquid measuring cup, whisk 1 egg, a splash of water, milk or cream, and a bit of salt and pepper.

Carefully pour about 1 teaspoon of the egg mixture over the fillings in each cup. Bake for about 10 minutes, or until the egg is puffed and the fillings are lightly browned. That's it. The quiche cups can be served warm or room temperature.

For the dessert, I went with a ridiculously easy and delicious no-cook option — creamy lemon-berry tartlets. These are so simple you even could delegate this part of the meal to the kids.

CREAMY LEMON-BERRY TARTLETS

Assuming these tartlets won't be consumed immediately, you don't even need to let them thaw before filling them. Just proceed with the recipe and by the time they are eaten they will be perfect. You'll usually find jarred lemon curd in with the jams and jellies.

Start to finish: 15 minutes
Makes 15 tartlets

INGREDIENTS

- ½ cup creme fraiche
- 2 tablespoons purchased lemon curd
- Pinch cinnamon
- 15 frozen baked phyllo cups
- 1 cup fresh berries
- Powdered sugar, to sprinkle

DIRECTIONS

1. In a small bowl, whisk together the creme fraiche, lemon curd and cinnamon until slightly thickened. Spoon 1 to 2 teaspoons of the mixture into each phyllo cup. The filling should be lightly mounded in the cups, but not overflowing.
2. Top each cup with several berries, then arrange the cups on a serving platter. Spoon powdered sugar into a mesh strainer, then hold it over the filled cups and gently tap to dust with sugar.

and oval instead of round, they even look a little like miniature eggs.

The recipe also is easy to adapt to other nuts, and other flavors, even chocolate (adding about 3 tablespoons of cocoa powder to the dough and substituting orange zest for the lemon).

The cookie dough is so easy to make that you could whip up several variations for Easter brunch, or make it even easier on yourself and serve ham sandwiches and these cookies and call it an Easter tea.

LEMON WEDDING COOKIES

Start to finish: 1 hour
Makes 3 1/2 dozen cookies

INGREDIENTS

- 1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, softened
- 1½ cups powdered sugar, sifted, divided
- ¼ teaspoon fine-grain salt
- Zest of 1 very large or 2 small lemons
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1 drop yellow food coloring (optional)
- 1½ cups all-purpose flour
- 1 cup lightly toasted pecans, finely chopped in a food processor or nut chopper

DIRECTIONS

1. In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the butter until light and fluffy. Add ½ cup of the powdered sugar, then beat well. Add the salt, lemon zest and vanilla and beat until creamy. Add the food coloring, if using. A little at a time, beat in the flour just until mixed.
2. Add the nuts, using a silicone spatula to stir them in. Place the dough in a small bowl or a plastic bag and chill for 30 to 60 minutes, or place in the freezer for about 15 minutes. At this stage, the dough also can be frozen for up to 1 month.
3. Meanwhile, heat the oven to 375 F. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper. Place the remaining 1 cup of powdered sugar in a medium bowl.
4. Once the dough has chilled, divide it into ½-inch balls. Arrange the balls on the prepared baking sheet, leaving 1 inch between them. Bake on the center rack for 10 to 12 minutes, or until the cookies are set on top and lightly golden on the bottom.
5. Let the cookies cool for 2 to 3 minutes on the cookie sheet. A few at a time, place the cookies in the bowl of powdered sugar and toss gently to coat well. Transfer the coated cookies to a rack to cool completely. Once cool, repeat the coating process with the bowl of powdered sugar. Store in an airtight container.

Buying used sports equipment often can save lots of money

KASEY TRENUM

COLUMNIST

Q: My kids play baseball and softball every spring, and it can get so expensive. By the time I factor in the cost of new equipment and postgame snacks, it's a considerable chunk of money.

A: I've got two kids who play sports, so I understand. Sports and other extracurricular activities can really take a bite out of your budget!

As you mentioned, equipment and snacks can be quite costly. Luckily, there are ways to save.

First, to save on sporting equipment, consider purchasing used: Check out stores like Play it Again Sports, or search Craigslist or children's consignment sales. You can typically score equipment as much as 50 to 75 percent off this way.

Next, if you've got more than one child, why not avoid buying gender-specific equipment items? For example, while pink cleats are cute, if you purchase black ones, a son can wear them after the daughter outgrows, or vice versa.

Other shopping hot spots I would suggest are nontraditional stores such as Marshall's and TJ Maxx or online retailers like eBay.

Do you know if you have a trade-in program at your child's school? If not, shop around for trade-in programs in your area.

Second, snacks, as you mentioned, are a big part of extracurricular activities. You can still provide your children with healthful snacks that will satisfy them without breaking the bank.

Don't wait until the last minute. To save the most, keep your eyes open for sales on your favorite snacks and sports drinks/bottled water. Pair these sales with a coupon and stock up for the season. You could cut your expense by 50 percent or more.

If you don't have time to look for sales and shop with coupons, try to buy in bulk at national warehouse stores like Costco or Sam's.

You can also look at discount stores like Odd Lots and Big Lots; they have a smaller selection but often offer big discounts on dry snacks and bottled drinks.

Is there an Aldi grocery store in your area? If there is, check it out. It has great prices. It doesn't accept coupons, but discounts are significant.

Here you can find bottled drinks, dried fruit, nuts and other power-packing snacks at a bargain.

Loan from boyfriend should include promissory note

COLUMNIST

Dear Amy: My girlfriend and I have been together for a few years. We've had our share of ups and downs. We live a few blocks from each other.

Recently, we discussed our tight money situation. A few days after that conversation, she asked me for a $1,000 loan, which she would pay back over the next couple of months.

She needed the money to pay off a settlement with an attorney she had used during her divorce. Not having the $1,000 readily available, I told her I would have to withdraw the funds from my son's college savings account.

I replied to her loan request by agreeing on the condition that she sign a promissory note for the loan.

She says this is the last straw, and proof that I don't really love (or trust) her. We haven't spoken since. Was I out of line?

— K

Dear K: Not only were you not out of line, but my thinking is that the person asking for a $1,000 loan should approach this respectfully by offering up front to sign a note, without being asked.

You report that money is tight for both of you. This should give your lady friend some insight about how high the stakes are for you.

Because you would have had to withdraw the money from a college fund, she was essentially mortgaging your son's education to pay her debt. Putting this in writing is not too much to ask.

Dear Amy: My husband, best friend and I like to go out together. Here's the typical scenario: They ask me what I would like to do, what restaurant to go to, or what movie to see.

I make a suggestion and they say they don't want to do that, so do I have any other ideas? Basically, I tee up ideas and they swat them away. I feel like a human batting cage. We invariably end up doing something they come up with.

This seems crazy to me. What is going on here? Should I simply stop coming up with ideas?

— Why Even Bother

Dear Bother: The next time this happens you can say, "Well, every time I tee up an idea, you two swat it away, so my first suggestion is that baseball season is almost here. Let's go to Cooperstown!"

If you have something you really want to do, then you'll have to be firm. Otherwise tell them, "Next time we go out you two can come up with all the ideas, make the arrangements, and I'll happily go to bat."

Dear Amy: It's impossible to drive anywhere without seeing the back window of the car in front of you with those cute stick figures of family members and pets.

These families are displaying their family pride and enthusiasm for their hobbies. Has anyone considered that displaying this information is providing any predator with valuable data?

Today I saw a rear window display of a father, mother, two small children and a cat. That tells a predator that all he has to do is to follow that woman home.

Her husband will be at work. And he will be free to do what he wants with only the cat there as witness.

— Aware

Dear Aware: You are making tons of assumptions: that the husband works, the mother is at home, etc., but I do take your admonition to heart.

We all give away a lot of information unthinkingly, and it's wise to be cautious.

Dear Amy: I'm responding to letters about how to take a compliment. Many years ago, I was a young lawyer and had a case in an unfamiliar county. A well-known attorney represented my client's adversary. I was intimidated by her, and afraid of being "hometowned."

After the case, she invited me to join the county's bar association at their monthly luncheon meeting. I accepted, but put up more of a battle over payment than she thought necessary. I will never forget her words: "Just say thank you graciously." A wise woman!

— Senior Judge Kristena LaMar

Dear Judge Lamar: It was also wise of you to take this lesson to heart.

Bathroom stalls can be tight fit

COLUMNIST

Dear Readers: Here is this week's Sound Off, about handicapped bathroom stall doors:

"The handicap stalls in public restrooms have the door opening outward. Why don't all the stalls open that direction? It would be easier if they didn't open inward, especially when you have a purse and maybe a bag to swing around the door."

— E.T., via email

Dear E.T.: Been there too many times, especially when traveling for a speech or personal appearance and using an airport restroom! I have almost been "trapped" a few times with luggage, purse and tote bag!

According to the Americans With Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines, the doors on handicapped stalls need to swing outward for ease of entering and exiting.

The other stall doors probably swing inward so the flow of "traffic" doesn't get slowed down and so someone walking by doesn't accidentally get hit!

Dear Heloise: I love to make paper crafts, and I always have bits and pieces left over. Many of my friends are scrapbookers as well. We decided as a group to do a paper swap.

Jesus knew He would die for our sins

COLUMNIST

Dear Rev. Graham: Did Jesus realize His enemies were planning to kill Him? If so, why didn't He just stay away from Jerusalem those last days, instead of deliberately going there and making it easy for them to arrest Him and put Him to death?

— K.R.

Dear K.R.: Yes, Jesus did realize some people would oppose Him, and that eventually they would enter into a conspiracy to kill Him.

He told His disciples, "The Son of Man is going to be betrayed into the hands of men. They will kill him, and after three days he will rise" (Mark 9:31).

And yet Jesus deliberately refused to escape from them — although He easily could have done so. Why? The reason is because He knew that God had sent Him into the world for one reason: to become the final and complete sacrifice for our sins.

He was without sin, but on the cross all our sins were placed on Him, and God's judgment for sin fell on Him. This is what Christians mean when they say that "Christ died in my place."

If there had been any other way for our sins to be erased, Jesus Christ never would have had to die. But there was no other way. God is holy and just, and because of that our sin had to be punished.

We deserved that punishment, but in His love, Jesus Christ took it for us. The Bible says, "This is love: not that we loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son as an atoning sacrifice for our sins" (1 John 4:10).

In just a few days, Christians around the world will celebrate Jesus' death and resurrection. I invite you to join them by giving your life to Jesus, and thanking Him for giving His life for you.

Statins are best treatment to reduce heart attack risks

DR. KEITH ROACH
COLUMNIST

Dear Dr. Roach: My husband is 68, and about seven years ago, during a cardiac catheter, doctors found a very small vessel more than half blocked, but it was too small even for a stent. The rest of his vessels looked pretty good.

The doctor put him on Zocor and Toprol. His total cholesterol is only about 160, and his LDL and HDL are normal. He is starting to have some slight short-term memory loss, and I have read that statins are noted for this.

I would like him to get off that and try more natural things, but his doctor is ADAMANT that he not quit.

Most of the studies that I have read recently are saying that cholesterol is not the cause of heart disease, and that if it is too low, it does cause cognitive problems.

What can we do, short of finding another doctor who is more reasonable to listen to our concerns?

My physician seems to be of the same thought that I am, but I don't want to cause problems with my husband's doctor. He has gone to him for more than 15 years and the doctor's father before him. What would you recommend?

— L.S.

Dear L.S.: You raise three very important points.

First, does someone with fairly minimal blockages in the heart and not very elevated cholesterol benefit from Zocor or other statins? That answer is, clearly, yes. No matter what the cholesterol, if it's high enough to cause blockages in arteries, it's too high.

Second, can statins cause memory problems? Also, the answer is absolutely yes, if you look at what people who are taking the medicines say. However, a large study showed no significant memory loss, but subtle loss may not have shown up in that study. Also, different statins may have different effects, and pravastatin, the one in the study, may be least likely to cause memory problems.

Third, is cholesterol the cause of coronary disease? It's probably only one cause among many, but then, statins have multiple effects, and not just on cholesterol. The take-home point is that statins save lives in people with blockages in their arteries. You should have a very good reason to stop taking them.

I believe strongly that patients (and families) should be able to make their own decisions, even if the doctor thinks it's not the best choice.

There certainly are more natural options, some of which may work, such as red yeast rice and fish oil. However, the best evidence we have is that statins, along with proper diet and exercise, are the best treatment we have to reduce the risk of heart attack and death from heart disease.

Dear Dr. Roach: Can you write about Addison's disease?

— D.L.

Dear D.L.: Addison's disease is an autoimmune condition where the body destroys the cells in the adrenal gland, which is responsible for making cortisone. Cortisone is important for many of the body's functions.

Early on, the symptoms of cortisone deficiency are subtle — fatigue, lightheadedness, low blood pressure. Too-low levels of cortisone can cause what is called an Addisonian crisis during times of stress.

Very low blood pressure, vomiting and diarrhea, fever and confusion are common signs. This is an emergency and needs to be treated with cortisone right away.

There are few treatments in medicine as effective as giving cortisone to someone with an Addisonian crisis — it's like watching someone come back to life.

Fortunately, Addison's disease is rare. It is most commonly diagnosed with a blood test, or by stimulating the adrenal gland with a hormone (ACTH) to see if cortisol levels in the blood go up. People with Addison's disease need replacement cortisone every day to prevent problems.

Horoscopes

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (March 24). This year has the movement of a dramatic dance: sometimes controlled and then suddenly taking brilliantly passionate turns. All of the strength training you did last year allows you to keep your footing. April brings a settlement followed by a new deal. Family celebrates you in May and August. You'll find new digs in June. Aquarius and Pisces people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 1, 24, 38 and 13.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll receive feedback. This could come from higher-ups regarding your upward potential, or it could be a customer's reaction to work product. Either way, it's a gift — albeit a gift that you'll be processing for a while.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Not everyone will share your high opinion of certain people. It would help you to take off your rose-colored glasses for a moment and see what others are seeing. Don't worry. You can always put them back on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The most successful and talented people you know have struggles. So don't think you're alone in this business of being human, having flaws and making mistakes.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). We are, by and large, a culture with a short attention span. It's something to consider when you're relaying a story today. Perhaps you should start in the middle.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll be inspired by what you experience and discover. Sharing this is tricky, though, because your point of view is so different now. What aren't they seeing that you see? How can you make them see it?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The reason you get things done now is that you consider what matters before you act. With a clear idea of why, you take the actions that are likely to have the biggest impact.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Efforts that are not in line with your goals give you an anxious feeling; whereas, you have a lot of fun when you know you're getting the right things done at the right time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Forthright, cheerful, outgoing people seem to get all of the attention. Not from you, though. A wonderful thing happens because you take the time to understand the enigmatic nuances of subtler types.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Others might misperceive you, and if they do, it's still valuable to know what they are thinking and why. No matter how off base the outsiders may be, there's still some wee kernel of truth to glean from their insight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You recognize that each person must follow his or her own path. You've demonstrated your affection quite fully, and now you want to appreciate and love someone while simply letting that person be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). When you go public with your creativity, the reaction might be mixed — and that is fine with you. You seek the unswerving devotion that comes from unconditional love, not the fickle attention of strangers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Before you chastise yourself for overthinking, lighten up. Rationalizing can be fun. The misuse of logical thought plus a wallop of humor equals an entertaining exercise or an excellent story.

Mother's leap of faith brings blessings for an entire family

"Our prayer and God's mercy are like two buckets in a well; while the one ascends, the other descends." — Mark Hopkins

By Priscilla Miller
Chicken Soup for the Soul

My husband was recovering in the hospital from cancer surgery, so he hadn't been able to work for some time.

With seven children to provide for, there wasn't any money left in my budget to buy a birthday gift for my son's ninth birthday.

The night before, I laid in bed trying to decide how I should spend my last five dollars.

My public assistance check wouldn't arrive in time. "God," I prayed, "I can either buy ice cream and ingredients for a birthday cake, or put gas in the car to visit my husband in the hospital. Help me know what to do."

I wanted so much for our little boy to have a nice birthday, but in my heart I knew the money needed to be spent on gas. I closed my eyes and placed my trust in God. A feeling of peace settled over me, and I drifted off to sleep.

Early the next morning the ringing phone woke me. Fearing it might be the hospital calling, I rushed to answer it.

An unfamiliar woman's voice asked: "Can you use any ice cream at your house? I know you have a large family, and my husband just brought home gallons of ice cream a local store was about to discard, and we can't possibly use it all."

The caller, a casual acquaintance who lived several blocks away, knew nothing about my husband's illness or that it was my son's birthday.

I burst into tears and told her my dilemma. After assuring me that my son would have ice cream for his birthday, she added: "I just finished a class in cake decorating and would love to try out my new skill. You go to the hospital and visit your husband. I'll drop by later with the ice cream and cake."

I spent the five dollars on gas and drove to the hospital, where I was surprised to see my husband at the door.

"The doctor discharged me!" he exclaimed. "I'm going home!"

When we walked into the house, the children squealed with delight and ran to their dad.

The excited birthday boy rushed to us. "Look! I have a Snoopy birthday cake!" Then he opened the freezer, took out a gallon of ice cream and the celebration began.

"Chicken Soup for the Soul" is compiled by Jack Canfield and Mark Victor Hansen. To submit a story for future publication, send it to P.O. Box 30880, Santa Barbara, CA 93130.

Screen Test

‘Croods’ storyline simple, but film visually dazzling

By Christy Lemire
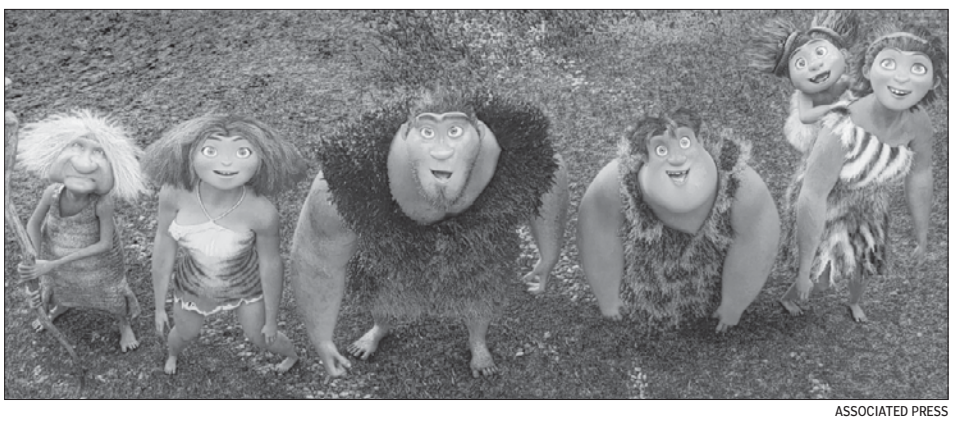
AP Movie Critic



ASSOCIATED PRESS

Review

Cavemen — they’re just like us! — or so “The Croods” seems to be saying with its familiar mix of generational clashes, coming-of-age milestones and generally relatable laughs.

The animated adventure features a strong, star-studded cast and dazzles visually in wondrously colorful, vibrant 3-D, but the script doesn’t pop off the screen quite so effectively. The overly facile message here is: Trying new things is good. It’s a useful notion for kids in the crowd to chew on, but their older companions may be longing for something more substantive. Still, “The Croods” is both brisk and beautiful, and should be sufficiently entertaining for family audiences for whom few such options exist these days.

“The Croods” might be especially resonant with young female viewers, with a strong, resourceful teenage girl at its center named Eep (voiced by Emma Stone). It’s the prehistoric era, and while the rest of Eep’s family prefers the comforting safety of hiding fearfully inside a cave, with only sporadic outings for group hunts, she longs to see what’s outside those stone walls.

Her dad, Grug (Nicolas Cage), is especially protective, neurotically worrying about every possible unknown and urging the same sort of apprehension in everyone else, including his supportive wife, Ugga (an underused Catherine Keener), and doltish 9-year-old son, Thunk (Clark Duke). (“Never not be afraid,” is one of dad’s favorite sayings.) There’s also a sharp-toothed Tasmanian devil of a baby named Sandy and Grug’s mother-in-law, voiced in reliably sassy fashion by Cloris Leachman. The gags that depict her as a disapproving nag are more than a bit stale; if there’s any heart-tugging or even vaguely engaging bond here, it’s the father-daughter one between Grug and Eep.

One day, Eep dares to escape while everyone else is sleeping and meets up with the hottest (and only) guy she’s ever seen. Conveniently, he’s named Guy, and he’s voiced by Ryan Reynolds. He has a furry, impossibly cute companion named Belt who holds up his pants (kids will dig this tiny scene-stealer). But he also astonishes her with something she’s never seen before called fire. Guy warns that the world is ending, and that she should come with him if she wants to live. When her family’s cave is destroyed, they reluctantly realize they must all go with Guy. This sets up: a) some basic, tried-and-true road trip jokes and b) a blossoming romance between Guy and Eep, which dad naturally tries to stifle.

The themes aren’t exactly groundbreaking from co-writers and directors Chris Sanders and Kirk DeMicco (with John Cleese sharing a story-by credit, having been a part of early drafts of the script), and the plot feels too repetitive with the Croods encountering one unexplored terrain after another and responding in predictable ways.

But the oohs, ahhs and scattered laughs come from the various creatures the Croods discover along their journey. Much of the lush landscape and vivid details feel as if they were taken directly from “Avatar,” and a similar sense of wonder propels these stronger segments.

“The Croods,” from DreamWorks Animation, is rated PG for some scary action. Running time: 92 minutes. Two and a half stars out of four.

Movie capsules

RECENT RELEASES

“Admission: A Princeton admissions officer who is up for a major promotion takes a professional risk after she meets a college-bound alternative school kid who just might be the son she gave up years ago in a secret adoption. Cast: Tina Fey, Paul Rudd, Nat Wolff. Rating: PG-13 (for language and some sexual material).

“The Croods”: The world’s very first prehistoric family goes on a road trip to an uncharted and fantastical world. Voice cast: Nicolas Cage, Ryan Reynolds, Emma Stone. Rating: PG (for some scary action).

“Inappropriate Comedy”: A computer tablet full of the world’s most hilariously offensive apps breaks through the borders of political correctness, stirring up cultural anarchy. Cast: Rob Schneider, Michelle Rodriguez, Adrien Brody. Rating: R (for strong crude and sexual content, graphic nudity, pervasive language and drug use).

“Olympus Has Fallen”: Disgraced former Presidential guard Mike Banning finds himself trapped inside the White House in the wake of a terrorist attack. Using inside knowledge he works with national security to rescue the president from kidnappers. Cast: Gerard Butler, Aaron Eckhart, Morgan Freeman. Rating: R (for strong violence and language throughout).

STILL SHOWING

“A Good Day To Die Hard”: John McClane travels to Russia to help out his seemingly wayward son only to discover that Jack is a CIA operative working to prevent a nuclear-weapons heist. Cast: Bruce Willis, Jai Courtney, Sebastian Koch. Rating: R (for violence and language).

“The Call”: When veteran 911 operator Jordan Turner receives a call from a girl who has just been abducted, she soon realizes that she must confront a killer from her past in order to save the girl’s life. Cast: Halle Berry, Evie Thompson, Abigail Breslin. Rating: R (for violence, disturbing content and some language).

“Escape From Planet Earth”: Astronaut Scorch Supernova finds himself caught in a trap when he responds to an SOS from a notoriously dangerous alien planet. Cast: Brenda Fraser, Sarah Jessica Parker, Jessica Alba: PG (for action and some mild rude humor).

“Dark Skies”: As the Barret familly’s peaceful suburban life is rocked by an escalating series of disturbing events, they come to learn that a terrifying and deadly force is after them. Cast: Keri Russell, Jake Brennan, Josh Hamilton. Rating: PG-13 (for violence, terror throughout, sexual material, drug content and language — all involving teens).

“Identity Thief”: A mild-mannered businessman travels from Denver to Miami to confront the deceptively harmless-looking woman who has been living it up after stealing his identity. Cast: Jason Bateman, Melissa McCarthy, John Cho. Rating: R (for sexual content and language).

Fraternal service groups face declining memberships

Downtown Toledo's crumbling Pythian Castle is, in some ways, a metaphor for America's declining participation in its service organizations.

Although the nation's population is larger than it was generations ago, many fraternal organizations and similar groups have declined since the 1960s.

Freemasonry membership, for example, has slipped since it peaked at 4.1 million members in America in 1959. Its latest domestic tally of 1.3 million members in 2011, the most recent figures available, hit a new low, according to figures posted online by the Masonic Service Association of North America.

Nobody has identified for certain why service-organization rolls are generally down. Some groups, such as Lions Club International, now claim a slight uptick after decades of decline.

Some theorize cultural changes brought on by baby boomers during the 1960s had an impact.

L. Keith Stooksberry, Jr., 64, of Findlay, Ohio, supreme vice chancellor of the Knights of Pythias international brotherhood, said he believes it began earlier, with the advent of television and has been accelerated by the number of distractions and competition for individual time since then, from a greater emphasis on school activities and sporting events to cable television, the Internet and social media.

Eighty years ago during the Pythians' peak, he said, people tended to do more things as family activities, and service organizations had greater roles in helping them socialize.

Declining participation in service organizations was a topic of the 2011 American Sociology Association's national conference. One presenter, Pamela Paxton, a sociology professor at the University of Texas at Austin, said at the time that scholars see the trend "as potentially detrimental to democracy."

The Knights of Pythias, the fraternal order that built downtown Toledo's Pythian Castle in 1890 and occupied much of the architecturally rare building for decades, most closely associates itself with Masons.

Both have ceremonial rituals steeped in long-standing customs, especially as members advance in rank. Both have reputations as "secretive" societies, although that appears — in recent years, at least — to have been overplayed.

Stooksberry said he finds questions about secrecy amusing.

"We have a password," Stooksberry said. "But it's not like nonmembers are beating down our doors and trying to sneak in."

The Knights of Pythias, which has a female counterpart called Pythian Sisters, was founded Feb. 19, 1864, by a man named Justus H. Rathbone to promote brotherly love among the North and South during the Civil War. It became the first American fraternal organization recognized by Congress.

The name was derived from an 1821 play by Irish poet and playwright John Banim based on the ancient Greek story of Damon and Pythias.

The two, as the story goes, were members of a school founded by Pythagoras, the Greek philosopher and mathematician. Their friendship was such a steel-like bond, each was willing to die for the other.

The Knights of Pythias does not have a religious affiliation, but requires members to believe in a supreme being. It uses the Bible as its book of law. Its purpose is to promote peace, harmony, friendship, and kindness.

"We take an obligation to pledge honor to God and country," Stooksberry said.

The group's secrecy prompted President Abraham Lincoln, in 1864, to have its original 13 members brought before him. The group claims Mr. Lincoln was so impressed by what he heard that he recommended they apply to Congress for a charter.

"If we could but bring its spirit to all our citizenry, what a wonderful thing it would be," the group quoted Lincoln as saying about the Pythians. "It breathes the spirit of friendship, charity, and benevolence."

Affiliates of the Knights of Pythias and the Pythian Sisters included two known for their pageantry and playfulness, the Dramatic Order of the Knights of Khorassan, or Dokeys, and the Nomads of Avrudaka, respectively.

A popular website credits the national Knights of Pythias with numerous high-profile members over the years, including musicians Louis Armstrong, Sun-Ra, and Freddie Martin; former presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt, Warren Harding, and William McKinley; former vice presidents Hubert Humphrey and Nelson Rockefeller; former U.S. Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia; evangelist Bob Jones, Sr., and several governors and other dignitaries.

Stooksberry said the Knights of Pythias peaked in popularity with about 600,000 members during the 1920s and 1930s, but has been on the decline since. The group has fewer than 30,000 members, about a third of them in New York state, he said.

Delicious Recipes in a dash!

Chili con Carne with Cheddar Scallion Biscuit Topping

Hands-on: 20 min | Total: 4 ½ hr | Serves: 8

FOR CHILI:
2½ lb boneless beef chuck roast, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 (15-oz) cans kidney beans, rinsed and drained
1 (15-oz) can diced tomatoes
1 cup canned tomato puree
2 medium onions, chopped
3 garlic cloves, minced
1 red bell pepper, chopped
2 Tbsp chili powder
1 Tbsp unsweetened cocoa powder
1 Tbsp chopped canned chipotle chiles in adobo
1 Tbsp Worcestershire sauce
2 tsp dried oregano
1 tsp ground cumin

FOR BISCUIT TOPPING:
2 tsp baking powder
¼ tsp salt
2 Tbsp cold unsalted butter, cut into ½-inch pieces
1 cup coarsely grated sharp cheddar cheese
2 scallions, chopped
2/3 cup whole milk

Directions:

1. For chili: Combine all chili ingredients in a 5- or 6-quart slow cooker and cook on high for 4 hours or on low for 8 hours.

2. For biscuit topping: When chili is about 1 hour from being done (see cook's note, below), make dough. Whisk together flour, baking powder, and salt in a large bowl. Blend in butter with your fingertips until mixture resembles coarse meal. Stir in cheese and scallions with a fork, then add milk and stir until a soft dough forms.

3. Meanwhile, in a large saucepan, melt butter over medium heat. Add flour and cook for 1 minute. Whisk in half-and-half, milk, salt, pepper, mustard, and half the cheese. Cook, stirring, for remaining cheese. Mix well.

Coal baron with mines here a top Bluegrass leader, poll finds

CHUCK STINNETT
BUSINESS EDITOR

His office is some 700 miles west of the Bluegrass. But Joseph Craft III still made the list of the 14 people who have the most influence on Lexington and central Kentucky, as determined in a poll of readers of The Lexington Herald-Leader and Kentucky.com.

Described by the newspaper as a "coal baron," Craft is the billionaire president and CEO of Alliance Resource Partners LP, the Tulsa, Okla.-based company that is the third-largest coal company in the eastern United States.

A native of the eastern Kentucky coalfields and a University of Kentucky graduate (with degrees in accounting and law), Craft is renowned in Lexington for having given $6 million for the basketball practice facility that bears his name and for coordinating the $8 million in donations to build the Wildcat Coal Lodge, where the U.K. men's basketball team lives. Craft was ranked No. 10 on the list of most influential people in the Bluegrass.

Craft would likely land on a similar ranking of the most influential people in the Henderson area. Among Alliance's operations are the River View Mine near Uniontown in Union County; the Dotiki Mine near Providence in Webster and Hopkins counties; the Onton No. 9 Mine near Sebree (acquired in 2012 as part of Chester Thomas' Green River Collieries LLC); and the Warrior and Hopkins mines near Madisonville.

The company is also in the process of developing another proposed mine near Sebree and is constructing the Gibson South Mine near Princeton, Ind., north of Evansville.

Aside from employing 1,000 or so people at mines in Union and Webster counties (and even more nearby), Craft has enough swing to have been able to bring U.K. head basketball coach John Calipari as well as Gov. Steve Beshear to rural Union County for the dedication of the River View Mine in September 2009.

To entice a governor to attend a major economic development event is one thing. But to bring Coach Cal to the Tri-county demonstrates that Joe Craft has influence, indeed.

Meanwhile, even as his defending national champion Wildcats were suffering through a subpar season, Calipari was picked as the No. 1 most influential person in the Lexington area.

Beating the skills shortage

A worker walks across The Rodon Group manufacturing facility floor earlier this month in Hatfield, Pa.

Some companies using creative methods to get workers they need

ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Rodon Group President and Chief Executive Officer Michael Araten poses for a portrait with Baxter, an adaptive manufacturing robot created by Rethink Robotics, at The Rodon Group manufacturing facility in Hatfield, Pa.

By Joyce M. Rosenberg
AP business writer

NEW YORK – There are three jobs open at Rodon Group, a plastic parts manufacturer near Philadelphia. But despite the reports of a shortage of skilled workers nationwide, CEO Michael Araten isn't sweating it.

Rodon, located in Hatfield, Pa., works with local community colleges to make sure students — the firm's prospective employees — get the skills they need to work at the company making plastic parts for products such as bed frames and machinery. Anyone using its manufacturing equipment needs to have math and computer skills.

"We're willing to look at non-traditional methods," Araten says.

Companies across the country have been working shorthanded because it's hard to find workers with the skills they need. The shortage is harder for small businesses than it is for larger ones. They don't have as many employees to step in to when there's an opening. Twenty-one percent of the owners who recently took part in a survey by the National Federation of Independent Business said they had openings they couldn't fill.

But some owners are finding solutions. Like Araten, they partner with schools. Some are running in-house training programs or pair skilled employees with co-workers who aren't up on the latest technology. And others are changing their recruiting strategy.

The skilled-worker deficit is getting more attention as the economy improves and businesses hire more. President Barack Obama mentioned the issue in his State of the Union address last month, calling for more training for workers.

The partnership solution: Araten and other Philadelphia-area manufacturers have formed a group to work with local community colleges to be sure students get the ground in math, science and computer skills that they'll need for jobs like building and operating robots.

When they arrive at Rodon, they'll start learning the company's manufacturing processes. Rodon, which also makes K'Nex toys, brightly colored plastic pieces that can be combined to form cars, animals, roller coasters and other objects, uses a manufacturing process called plastic injection molding that's run with computers and robots.

Rodon's workforce of about 100 is getting older. CEO Araten wants to be sure he has people ready to step in as workers in their 50s and 60s start to retire.

"That's why we've increased our relationship with schools to be sure we're first in line," he says.

Tailored Label Products' partner is a program called Second Chance, which finds training and jobs for students who are in danger of dropping out of high school, says Tracy Tenpenny, a vice president at the Menomonee Falls, Wis. company.

The students learn how to use complex computer-operated machines to create customized labels that go into car engines and electronic equipment. They spend two hours each day in class and six hours at the factory earning slightly above minimum wage.

Tailored Label turned to Second Chance as the company started to grow and needed more skilled workers.

Study: Good bosses spur enthusiasm, productivity in workers

By Joyce Gannon
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

> "Engagement increases dramatically with four variables: enthusiasm, confidence, empowerment and inspiration."
> David Fagiano, Chief operating officer of Dale Carnegie

Even when workers are passionate about the day-to-day tasks involved in their jobs, they won't be engaged in the workplace unless they click with their immediate bosses and trust in how senior executives are leading the company.

Those are among the conclusions of a recently released study by Dale Carnegie Training that sought to determine what drives employee engagement. Besides workers' relationship with their supervisors and how they feel about management, the survey found that pride in the company is the third critical factor that contributes to engagement.

Rather than attempt to measure how engagement impacts the company's bottom line or workers' productivity, the survey tried to dig down and identify the emotions that help employees feel a stronger commitment to their employers.

"Engagement increases dramatically with four variables: enthusiasm, confidence, empowerment and inspiration," said David Fagiano, chief operating officer of Dale Carnegie, a leadership consulting business in Hauppauge, N.Y.

"There's a strong correlation between people who felt those emotions and their engagement," he said. "If as a supervisor you can instill those, (your employees) can really outperform for you."

The study polled 1,500 workers ages 18 to over 61 between February and April 2012.

Nearly half, or 49 percent, who said they were satisfied with their direct manager also felt engaged in the workplace while 80 percent who were "very dissatisfied" with the boss felt disengaged overall at work.

Among those who were confident with senior leadership's abilities, 61 percent said they were fully engaged at work.

Leaders can instill trust in their strategies by fostering open communication and seeking feedback from employees, Fagiano said. Some ways to do that include making the corporate mission clear to all workers and getting them involved in long-term planning and letting them know outcomes.

At a company where Fagiano once worked with about 1,000 employees, "We involved them all — from janitors to senior vice presidents — in planning. You can't give this lip service. It could be a killer if you say, 'Tell me what you think about X,' and then I don't get back to you."

The study found the highest levels of engagement among individuals who were on the job for five years or less.

"There's the newness of the job and the excitement of being out doing new things," Fagiano said. Among workers who are 50 to 60 years old, that enthusiasm "trails off."

"Things become kind of old hat, and they become less engaged. When you're young you feel immortal, and when you're 60 there are not that many doors open."

A place where employee engagement may soon be tested is Yahoo, the Silicon Valley Internet company whose chief executive, Marissa Mayer, recently told employees they will have to work regularly in the office, not at home.

"There's a huge trust issue there," Fagiano said. "The major issue is that it's such a radical change. You were doing X and now you're told to do Y. That's a 180-degree turn."

Some Yahoo employees are likely wondering why Mayer or other senior managers didn't seek their opinions about the pros and cons of working from home, Fagiano said.

"Whether it's the right or wrong decision, it probably won't help with engagement levels," he said.

For fastest Internet connection, upgrade your router

COMPUTERS

Wi-Fi makes connecting to the Internet seem like magic. There's a wonderful signal passing through the air that makes my phone work faster and unplugs my laptop from the cable — miraculous!

If you're affected by slow speed or bad reception, however, staying connected can be a drag. Try these tricks to improve your home or office Wi-Fi.

Step 1: Consider your hardware.

If your router is even a few years old, it may be time to upgrade. A router that's slow or incapable of transmitting a lot of data at once will compromise your whole network.

If you're using an older generation of wireless router (designated as Wireless A, B or G), consider upgrading to a Wireless N router — especially if you have multiple systems connecting simultaneously, stream HD video to your computer or TV, or play online games.

Wireless N supports a larger bandwidth, meaning your network can process more data simultaneously. It won't get bogged down as quickly if you're accessing a large file or if multiple devices go online at the same time.

Wireless N also can improve range. As you get farther from the router, Wi-Fi signal weakens.

Think of a garden hose: Water pressure starts out strong at the source but weakens with distance. A router that supports a larger bandwidth is like getting a thicker hose: The signal will go farther before it dies out. Upgrade your router, and you may gain Wi-Fi access in places that are inaccessible now.

While Wireless N routers will work with the standards for devices manufactured earlier, you'll get the best performance if your device also supports a Wireless N connection. This may require upgrading the Wi-Fi access card in a desktop or laptop.

Step 2: Eliminate interference.

If you have neighbors with Wi-Fi networks in close enough proximity, it can interfere with your network's stability. Routers can operate on a number of channels, and using the same channel or one too close to your neighbor will degrade your signal.

Wi-Fi Stumbler, from Meraki, is a network locator application that provides a graph of available channels. Choose a channel with the most space around it.

It's OK to pick up some competing signals near you, so long as they're weaker than yours. Don't choose a channel with a strong competing signal.

If you have a lot of electronics in or around your home, you may benefit from a dual-band router. Single-band routers operate on the 2.4 GHz band, a relatively crowded signal interface used by many wireless phones, microwaves, baby monitors and other common electronics.

A dual-band router operates on both the standard 2.4Ghz radio and less crowded 5Ghz radio, offering a signal that's less prone to interference.

If you can't upgrade to a dual-band router, move your router as far from conflicting appliances as possible.

Step 3: Location, location, location.

Wi-Fi transmission can be blocked or weakened by obstructions between the router and the device.

Don't hide it away in a cabinet — position your router centrally, without too many thick walls to block its signal. Point antennas vertically and elevate the router, if possible. Wi-Fi signals travel best down and sideways, so placing your router in the attic or a on a high shelf may give your signal a little boost.

One caveat: If your router often drops a signal or requires frequent resets, make sure it's easily accessible.

Next week, I'll lay out more ways to improve the strength and reliability of your Wi-Fi network.

Review: Tech in Galaxy S 4 doesn't come together

■ Touch-screen lets user 'hover'

By Peter Svensson
Associated Press

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Attendees try out the new Samsung Galaxy S 4 during the Samsung Unpacked event at Radio City Music Hall in New York earlier this month.

NEW YORK — The Galaxy S 4, Samsung's latest and greatest, has a cute feature we'll probably see in a lot of phones soon: You can shoot both yourself and your surroundings at the same time, using the front- and back-mounted cameras. It's a bit like having a two-camera film crew follow you around.

But other than that, it's hard to point to anything that will set the world on fire in the new phone, revealed recently at an event in New York.

The S 4 has what you'd expect from a new smartphone: a bigger screen and a faster processor. It may prove to be unfortunate that Samsung didn't stop there when it presented the successor to its hit Galaxy S III, because the phone has a grab-bag of features that don't come together as a pleasing whole.

The phone will go on sale sometime between late April and the end of June; expect it to start at $200 with a two-year contract.

Samsung provided reporters with some hands-on time with pre-production units, which revealed the S 4 to be, in terms of hardware, a solid successor to the III.

The screen is slightly larger, at 5 inches on the diagonal compared to 4.8 inches for the III and 4 inches for the iPhone 5. It sports a resolution of 1920 by 1080 pixels, as much as you'd find on a high-definition TV set.

The bigger screen is crammed into a chassis that's actually a hair narrower and thinner than the S III's. This is quite a feat. Samsung shrank the frame surrounding the screen to make room.

Shrinking other internal components allowed it to make the battery 20 percent larger than III's, but Samsung isn't saying whether that translates into longer battery life — the added battery power could be eaten up by software and hardware changes.

The body is still dominated by softly molded plastic, and the S 4 doesn't really advance the aesthetics of its predecessor the way competitors Apple, Sony and HTC have done with their latest phones.

Apple and HTC, in particular, have put a lot of sweat into machining metal into jewel-like enclosures; Samsung doesn't seem to care all that much about looks.

Samsung does care about trying to push the envelope on what the phone does, but it may have poked through the envelope, tearing a hole or two in it.

It's probably not a disaster, because most of its features can be turned off, but first-time users could be confused.

For one thing, Samsung is taking the whole "touch-screen" thing further by now sensing when the user's finger is hovering over the screen.

In other words, you don't even need to touch the phone to make it react.

Hovering over a thumbnail of a picture in the Gallery will reveal a bigger thumbnail, and hovering over one email in a list will show a preview of its first lines.

The idea is similar to the "mouse hover" feature on a PC, which sometimes reveals things before the mouse is clicked.

Implementing it on a smartphone is trickier, though.

On the PC, you have to use the mouse, so you'll discover the hover functions in the normal course of use.

But since the feature is new in a smartphone and there's normally no reason to have your finger hovering over the screen, users are likely to discover this feature only by chance.

That wouldn't be so bad if all applications responded to hovering in a consistent manner, but very few applications react to it all.

On the S 4, the "Email" app will show previews, but the "Gmail" app won't. The built-in "Gallery" app will show picture previews, but other photo apps won't.

I suspect users will get tired of trying to hover with their fingers and give up on the whole thing.

The hovering feature also sets the phone up for another problem. In my testing, I found that the phone sometimes registered a close hover as a touch.

In other words, the screen was overly sensitive, thinking I was touching it when I wasn't. This may be fixed by the time the phone is in production, but it's potentially an annoying issue.

The S 4 tries to divine your intentions in two additional ways. It has an infra-red sensor that looks for hand movements up to about 4 inches away from the phone, and it uses the front-side camera to figure out if it's front of the user's face.

Thanks to the IR sensor, the phone's browser responds to an "up swipe" in the air above it with by scrolling up, and to a "side" swipe by jumping to another tab.

This could be pretty useful when the smartphone is the lunchtime companion and you don't want to grease it up with foody fingers, but again, the "air swipe to scroll" shows up in only a few applications.

The camera is supposed to engage when you're watching a video, pausing playback if it thinks you're looking away.

This didn't work in the preproduction unit I tested, but it's hard to imagine that this is a feature to die for.

The list of user interface innovations goes on, but they don't amount to a coherent new way of interacting with the phone.

Nor do they turn the phone into something that's intelligently aware of what goes on around it. It's more like Samsung is throwing a bunch of technologies into the phone to see what sticks. Sometimes, that's how progress works, but consumers might not appreciate being guinea pigs.

Pepsi unveils new shape for bottle

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – Pepsi is rolling out a new shape for its 20-ounce bottle for the first time in about 17 years.

The new bottle has a contoured bottom half that appears easier to grip, and the wraparound label is shorter so that more of the drink is exposed. The change follows a number of splashy moves in the past year by PepsiCo to improve results for its namesake soda, including a multiyear deal to sponsor the Super Bowl halftime show and a wide-ranging deal with pop star Beyonce.

PepsiCo Inc., based in Purchase, N.Y., has been working to revitalize the brand after losing market share to Coca-Cola Co. in recent years.

Andrea Foote, a PepsiCo spokeswoman, said the new 20-ounce bottle is part of the company's ongoing update of marketing and packaging materials for the cola. The single-serve bottles, which are widely sold in coolers at drugstores and other retailers, will begin rolling out in April. The new shape will also be used for the 16-ounce bottles, which aren't as common, as well as Diet Pepsi, Pepsi Max and Pepsi Next.

Foote said it will take a year or two before the new bottles entirely replace the current bottles, which she says were introduced in 1996.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

This product image provided by Pepsi shows the new shape for the 20-ounce bottle. The new bottle has a contoured bottom half that appears easier for holding, and the wraparound label is shorter so that more of the drink is exposed.

"The engineers have to go to all the plants and convert the lines," Foote said. The new bottles will first appear in the New York area, then roll out to Chicago, parts of California and Florida.

Coca-Cola, based in Atlanta, says its current 20-ounce contour bottle made its U.S. debut in 1993. Small changes were made over the years, such as making the surface easier to grip and shortening the neck of the bottle.

Despite PepsiCo's stepped up efforts, its beverage volume in North America declined by 4 percent last year. That included a 4 percent declined in carbonated soft drinks and a 3 percent decline in noncarbonated drinks, according to a regulatory filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

PepsiCo makes a wide range of products, including Frito-Lay chips, Gatorade, Quaker Oats and Tropicana. But it has long been defined by its namesake soda and its rivalry with Coca-Cola.

'Stewardship of Wealth' author examines superrich, how they live

By Tim Grant
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

In a legendary exchange between two great American authors, F. Scott Fitzgerald reportedly said: "Let me tell you about the very rich. The rich are different from you and me." Ernest Hemingway famously replied: "Yes, they have more money."

While that assessment may have been oversimplified, both men were essentially correct.

But wealth manager Gregory Curtis has made a far more comprehensive evaluation in his book, "The Stewardship of Wealth: Successful Private Wealth Management for Investors and Their Advisors," which he wrote based on more than 30 years of handling the financial affairs of billionaire clients such as the Mellon family.

"To be sure, the challenges facing wealthy families who aspire to happiness — that is all wealthy families — are different from those of other families in the same way the challenges facing welfare families are different from those facing middle class families," wrote Curtis, chairman and founder of Greycourt & Co. Inc. in Pittsburgh.

Gregory Curtis

What really sets rich people apart, he said, is they can easily buy control of their lives or use their money to avoid anything they consider unpleasant — such as working a steady job or raising their own children in some cases.

Beyond that, the rich are about the same as everyone else.

"Stewardship of Wealth" is written for the audience Curtis and his partners at Greycourt serve — the ultrarich — with the main idea being that stewardship isn't just about investing. That is one of the last things his readers need to worry about, which is why the chapters on that topic are near the end of the book.

The stakes are much higher for the super wealthy in many ways, according to Curtis.

Even if they get the investment stuff right, the money they have amassed could be at risk if they fail in other important areas.

For instance, if rich parents don't raise their children right, the children will probably blow all the money, ruining their lives and others' in the process.

"If you can just sit back and watch the money come in, pretty soon you don't think very well of yourself," Curtis said. "That's why I'm constantly saying to these young wealthy people to get off your butt and go out and do something.

"Use your money to make the world a better place and devote your personal time to it because that's the most precious resource you have. Money, you have plenty of it. If you want to write a check for some good cause, that's easy. But getting your own hands dirty, rolling up your sleeves, and going out and doing something — that's going to make you happy."

No matter how well a family stewards its wealth, people tend to compound faster than money does.

"If you look at a family like the Rockefellers or the Mellons or the Morgans — old wealth," Curtis said.

"Well, today there are hundreds and hundreds of people in those families and the money keeps getting divided into smaller and smaller pieces. ...

"So really 80 percent to 90 percent of American wealth disappears in about three generations. And that's pretty much true all over the world," he said.

BUSINESS PERSONNEL

NEW POSITIONS

Francine J. Perry, formerly of Henderson, has been appointed senior standards engineer for enterprise engineering standards at Deere & Company World Headquarters in Moline, Ill.

Francine J. Perry

Perry will manage and coordinate the development and publication of John Deere engineering standards and uniform procedures. She will also work with worldwide units to identify and facilitate adoption of suitable international, regional, national and industry standards to simplify communication with suppliers and enhance global availability of parts and materials.

She also will participate in the relevant standards development committees for ASABE, SAE, ASME, ASTM, ISO and IEC where standards significantly affect the company, to ensure that John Deere's interests are reflected.

Perry joined John Deere in 2001. She has held positions as a design engineer, manufacturing engineer and hydraulics engineer. She is a Certified Fastener Specialist and holds a title naming her as an inventor after developing a registered patent for the company.

She graduated from the University of Kentucky with a mechanical engineering degree and holds an MBA from St. Ambrose University in Davenport, Iowa.

Perry resides in Bettendorf, Iowa, with her husband, Mike, and their son. She is the daughter of Steven D. and Elaine Gold of Henderson.

Meanwhile, her husband, Michael R. Perry, formerly of Marion, has been appointed safety manager for John Deere Davenport Works in Davenport, Iowa. The 2.2-million-square-foot plant manufactures articulated dump trucks, four-wheel-drive loads, motor graders, log skidders and cabs.

He joined the company in 1998 as a safety engineer analyst and later served as safety director for engine works in Waterloo and Ottumwa, Iowa, earning a citation for achieving the highest safety performance in the Deere enterprise.

Most vehicles no longer need to have tires, oil checked at every fill-up

Dear Tom and Ray: I'm an old geezer with fond memories of when you could pull into a gas station and tell the kid to fill it up and check the tires, oil (the kid holding up the dipstick so you could see it: "Sir, you're a quart low") and water. In fact, at one time, I was that kid.

Those days are long gone, but that leaves me with a problem.

I'm a bit arthritic, and it is difficult for me to bend over and contort myself to check the air pressure in my tires, and much more so to wrestle that air hose that really wants to contract back into its hole. I suppose I could check the oil and water myself, but I'd really rather not.

I'd be willing to pay for this extra service, but I can't find anywhere that offers it in my neighborhood, maybe not even in my city. I wouldn't want to pay a lot — it shouldn't take someone who's more nimble than I more than five minutes.

I suppose I could take my car to my mechanic's shop, but it seems kind of lame to ask him to check the, you know, air, water and oil. Of course, I am kind of lame!

CLICK AND CLACK

Any suggestions?

— Rick

Tom: You're right, Rick, that these sorts of services are rarely provided anymore. What you may not know is that they're hardly necessary anymore, either.

Ray: In the old days, everything leaked: crankcases, radiators, tires.

But cars are much better now, and are much more maintenance-free (on a day-to-day, week-to-week basis) than they've ever been.

Tom: And when you do have a leak, there's often an idiot light now to let you know about it. We had an extra set of idiot lights installed in my brother's car just to give the lights a fighting chance against him.

Ray: Nowadays, if you lose tire pressure, all new cars have tire-pressure-monitoring systems that will alert you on the dashboard.

Tom: Most new cars have coolant-level indicators now to tell you if you've lost coolant.

That gives you a heads-up that you're a little low before the idiot light comes on to warn you that your engine is about to melt.

Ray: For oil, more and more cars have oil-level lights, in addition to the old oil-pressure lights. And car batteries are all sealed now and maintenance-free.

Tom: So, you just don't need to check those things with every fill-up, like you did in years past. And if you have a well-maintained, modern car with tire-pressure monitoring, you easily can go three to six months between checking that stuff.

Ray: If you have an older car, a high-mileage car or a car with a known problem, obviously, you'll have to check things more often.

Tom: But whenever it IS time, it's absolutely fine to go to a repair shop and ask them to look at the fluids and tire pressure for you. We have older customers who come in and ask us to do that all the time.

We do it for free, as a courtesy, and then we add a hundred bucks to their next repair bill.

Ray: Not true! Usually, the customer will tip the guy who checks everything five or 10 bucks. That makes everybody happy.

Tom: You also can search online (or beg a grandchild to do it for you, Rick!) for "full-service gas stations" in your area. There aren't a lot of them left, these days, but there seem to be at least a few in every city. If you find one of those nearby, take your business there.

Ray: You'll pay for those services there, too, but it'll be in the form of a few extra cents a gallon. And you'll even get your windshield cleaned. Wouldn't that be a treat?

Dear Tom and Ray: I have a 2003 Mitsubishi Lancer with about 90,000 miles. Several months back, I was driving home on a rainy night and splashed through a deep puddle. Immediately, a loud whining noise came from the car, which grew louder when I pushed on the gas.

A minute later, it stopped. Then about a week later, on another rainy day, it happened again. It happens for only about a minute, then stops.

It now happens even when it's not raining, when I just step on the gas for more power. The whining is very loud and scary, and it makes me think the car is going to explode.

My husband thinks it's nothing and that I should continue to ignore it; however, I am pregnant and don't want to head into motherhood worrying about my safety and the safety of my baby. Please help!

— Moon

Ray: It sounds to me like a slipping belt, Moon. I'm guessing your splash guard fell off, and that allowed water to splash up and temporarily lubricate your belt.

Belts aren't supposed to be lubricated; they're supposed to be sticky. When a belt slips and slides on its pulleys, it makes that shrieking/whining noise.

Tom: And all that slipping wore out your belt even more, so now it slips even when it's not wet.

Ray: It makes noise when you step on the gas, which is a classic symptom of a loose or worn-out belt. Eventually, the belt will get so bad that it'll squeal all the time.

Then one day it'll break and fall off, and you'll lose your power steering and alternator, among other things.

Tom: But the noise will be gone!

Ray: True. But my advice would be, before that happens, to take it into a shop and tell them you have what you think is a belt noise, and ask them to check it out. You want to get this fixed, Moon.

Trust me on this — there will be more than enough squealing and whining in your future. You need to enjoy and savor all the peace and quiet you can get in the next few months!

Tax proposal could help small business, economy

By Joyce M. Rosenberg
AP business writer

NEW YORK — A notable piece of small-business news on Capitol Hill this year isn't about a bill — it's about a tax proposal that could lift some of the uncertainty owners have been complaining about.

Under a proposal announced last week by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dave Camp, R-Mich., a popular tax deduction for equipment purchases would become permanent and be set at $250,000, aside from annual adjustments for inflation.

Known as the Section 179 deduction, it's scheduled to drop to $25,000 next year after having been at $500,000 from 2010 through 2013.

If the proposal becomes law, it could give owners some predictability — something they've been clamoring for given the large list of other uncertainties they've been sacked with such as health care, minimum wage and the economy. The deduction has fluctuated in recent years and has made it difficult for small businesses to plan.

Not knowing what the deduction will be forces business owners to play a sort of roulette — do they buy a drill press or an SUV before the end of the year and take advantage of the current deduction, or wait to see what the new year brings?

There are ramifications for the broader economy that go beyond the boost from spending on equipment.

If small-business owners have a better idea of how much money they might save on their taxes, they might feel more secure and then expand and hire.

House Ways and Means Committees Chairman Rep. Dave Camp, R-Mich., listens during a meeting in July in Washington. Camp announced a proposal earlier this month that a popular tax deduction for equipment purchases would become permanent and be set at $250,000, aside from annual adjustments for inflation. Known as the Section 179 deduction, it's scheduled to drop to $25,000 next year after having been at $500,000 from 2010 through 2013.

Small businesses account for more than 99 percent of U.S. companies, and they employ about half the country's work force, or about 60 million people.

One of the greatest sources of uncertainty about the deduction is the fact that Congress has been erratic in setting the amount of the deduction and sometimes has made changes retroactively.

In January, Congress gave final approval to a bill that boosted the 2013 deduction to $500,000 from a planned $25,000 — but many owners had already made purchases in 2012 expecting a smaller deduction in the coming year.

"People were making decisions they normally wouldn't be making at the end of last year," says Brian Burt, an attorney with the law firm Snell & Wilmer in Phoenix. His clients include small businesses in the manufacturing, financial services and software industries.

"That uncertainty makes for bad decision making," Burt says. One of his clients, a consumer products manufacturer, bought new machines at the end of the year to increase its capacity. Another manufacturing client invested in new software.

The deduction, named after a section of the federal tax law, allows small businesses to deduct up front the costs of equipment such as vehicles, manufacturing machines, furniture and computers.

The deduction is important and popular because it allows small businesses to get a tax savings on the entire cost of equipment in the year it was purchased.

Without it, they would have to depreciate the costs over a period of years which varies according to the type of equipment. Companies that get a refund get a boost in their cash flow from their tax savings.

"The Section 179 proposal is pretty big because it affects everybody," says John Arensmeyer, the CEO of Small Business Majority, a group that lobbies on behalf of small businesses.

The deduction was created as part of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 — a law passed to help the country emerge from the 1980 recession. In 1982, the year it took effect, the deduction was $5,000. Congress increased it through the years until it reached $125,000 in 2007.

It doubled to $250,000 in 2008-09 because of the Great Recession, and subsequently rose to $500,000.

How much a small business saves in taxes from the deduction depends on how much they spend on equipment, and on the company's or owner's tax rate.

In many small companies, including sole proprietorships, partnerships and some corporations, owners pay business taxes on their individual returns.

Camp, the Ways and Means chairman, released what he called a bipartisan discussion draft of proposals to reform tax rules that affect small businesses. The draft, which Camp said was being circulated so the public can offer feedback, is intended to be part of an overhaul of the entire tax system.

Other suggestions in the draft included a doubling of the deduction for startup costs and later tax return filing deadlines for small corporations.

Groups that lobby on behalf of small businesses say circulating the proposal publicly before it becomes a bill is a good move.

"This is the first time that I can recall when there's been a tax reform discussion framed this way," says Todd McCracken, CEO of the National Small Business Association. "The idea of putting it above board for comment is really kind of refreshing."

The NSBA likes the idea of a permanent Section 179 deduction, although McCracken says his group would like to see a higher amount.

Small businesses shouldn't be subject to a limit on deducting equipment purchases, says Karen Kerrigan, CEO of the Small Business & Entrepreneurship Council. Under current law, when a company reaches the limit, it must use depreciation to deduct amounts over $500,000, a process that takes years.

Given the fighting in Congress over taxes — most recently, the year-end battle over tax rates for the wealthiest people — and the current focus on cutting the budget deficit, it's hard to predict how the Section 179 proposal will fare.

Camp has said that tax cuts must be offset by tax increases elsewhere. Lower taxes for small businesses would likely mean higher taxes for someone else — which could make it a tough sell in the current climate in Congress.

"It's hard to handicap this stuff right now," says Arensmeyer, the Small Business Majority CEO.

But Kerrigan thinks the proposal has a good chance of becoming law because it has bipartisan support in Congress, and because it appeals to small businesses.

"It's something that small business can look to and say, 'this can make a difference for my firm,'" she says.

Wal-Mart expanding test of its mobile checkout program

■ Customers can scan items on Apple devices

By Anne D'innocenzio
AP retail writer

NEW YORK — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is expanding a test of a new checkout program that allows shoppers to scan items with their smartphones while they're in the aisles and then pay at self-checkout terminals.

The world's largest retailer launched what it calls its "Scan & Go" program late last year in about 70 stores in Atlanta and in the Bentonville, Ark., area, where the retailer is based.

It is now testing the program in more than 200 stores in markets including Dallas, Houston, Austin, Texas; Denver, Portland, Ore., Seattle, and Phoenix.

The pilot program will still be in a small number of Wal-Mart's more than 4,000 stores in the U.S. But it's part of the company's overall strategy to involve customers' increasing use of smartphones.

More than half of Wal-Mart's customers have smartphones, and 40 percent of traffic from walmart.com is coming from shoppers' mobile devices, said Gibu Thomas, senior vice president of mobile and digital initiatives at Wal-Mart's global e-commerce division.

"Our goal is to give choices to all of our customers however they want to shop," Thomas said during an interview with The Associated Press Wednesday. "It's part of a holistic program to empower the customer."

The program works like this: Customers scan bar codes of the different products using the retailer's Scan & Go app downloaded onto Apple Inc. iPads, iPhones or iPod Touch devices. The app generates a code, which can be scanned at the self-checkout terminals.

The app is only available for Apple devices but Wal-Mart says it has plans to eventually release versions for other platforms.

Wal-Mart, meanwhile, has been expanding its self-checkout terminals and plans to add more than 10,000 self-checkout registers by the end of this year in the U.S.

The pilot program has been well-received so far by customers, with more than half of the shoppers who tried the "Scan & Go" app using again, Thomas said.

He noted it's a good way for shoppers looking to keep a running tally of how much they're spending as they place the products in their carts — instead of being surprised at the cash register.

But Thomas also noted that the new service has also appealed to shoppers who like to do their own bagging of groceries. Shoppers can pick up bags at the front of the store and organize the groceries in the bags the way they want.

"They like to bag items the way they keep their items in the house," he said.

Study sheds light on funds' hidden expenses

■ 'Trading costs really are an invisible cost'

By Mark Jewell
AP personal finance writer

BOSTON — There is no shame in being cost-conscious.

Price is often the critical factor when mutual fund companies compete for business. They want to be able to tout the lowest expense ratios for their funds. That's the figure that shows how much investors pay to cover operational costs. But it isn't the only cost you should be thinking about.

There's another significant cost that's harder to quantify, isn't disclosed, and remains largely invisible: expenses from the trades that the fund manager makes.

Three university professors tried to calculate the impact of trading costs on fund performance, and their conclusion suggests that a fund's expense ratio doesn't come close to capturing the full costs that investors pay.

The study's authors found that the typical fund's trading-related expenses take a bigger bite out of investment returns than the separate fund management costs reflected in the expense ratio.

They estimate trading costs shave an average 1.44 percent from returns a year. That's substantially more than the impact from funds' posted expenses, as the average expense ratio of the funds studied was 1.19 percent.

Although the study found trading costs to be more significant, good luck to any investor hoping to calculate the impact they can have on a specific fund and its returns. There's no practical way to get a decent estimate. In contrast, fund expense ratios are easy to find and precise.

"On a practical level, given the current state of affairs, trading costs really are an invisible cost," says Roger Edelen, an associate professor of finance at the University of California-Davis.

The study by Edelen and co-authors Richard Evans of the University of Virginia and Gregory Kadlec of Virginia Tech is published in the current edition of the Financial Analysts Journal.

The cost analysis: The study analyzed portfolios and trading data from nearly 1,800 stock funds from 1995 through 2006. A cost was estimated for each trade based on three components of trading expenses.

The first two are brokerage commissions paid to execute transactions, and bid-ask spreads. The spreads are the time-sensitive gaps between a stock's asking price and its selling price. A significant mismatch can make a stock more expensive to buy and cheaper to sell, cutting into an investor's return.

Market impact: The professors concluded the third component, price impact, is the most significant. When a fund makes a big stock purchase or sale, that trade can affect that stock's market price as the transaction is completed, typically to the detriment of the fund's performance.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Specialist Donald Civitanova, right, works at his post on the floor of the New York Stock earlier this month.

When a fund buys a large number of shares, the stock's price is likely to rise as the transaction is carried out, resulting in a higher share purchase price. A stock that a manager considered a good investment at $100 a share might be purchased for an average of $101. Then, when the manager looks to sell later on, the opposite happens.

It's an especially important challenge for funds that specialize in stocks of small companies that aren't heavily traded.

"The real killer on trading costs is price impact," Edelen says. "The fund manager on average buys a little bit high, and sells a little bit low."

For example, if the market gains 10 percent in a year, a fund that bought stocks that performed that well on average may only generate a 9 percent return, after trading costs. Successful fund managers might be able to offset those costs if their portfolios outperform the market. But high trading costs make that challenge especially difficult, Edelen says.

Invisible costs: Trading costs are subtracted from the fund's assets, but aren't reflected in the expense ratio. Both types of costs ultimately affect the investment return.

But the trading costs aren't disclosed or easily calculated. The brokerage component of a fund's trading costs is typically detailed in a disclosure known as a "statement of additional information." But few investors read them, and there's no information on costs from bid-ask spreads or price impacts.

Another view: John Rekenthaler, vice president of research with Morningstar, says his company's studies also have found that trading costs can significantly reduce a fund's returns.

Although he didn't make any specific criticisms of the methods used by Edelen and his co-authors, Rekenthaler said the estimate of a 1.44 percent average annual impact for a typical stock fund sounds high.

FROM THE COVER

STINNETT
from 1D

Lexington Mayor Jim Gray ranked No. 2, while the No. 3 ranking went to railroad magnate R.J. Corman, whose company cleans up and repairs train derailments around Kentucky and beyond, including a May 2010 CSX freight train derailment near Robards and last weekend's 20-car derailment at Morton's Gap in Hopkins County. (Corman's company also operates the sumptuous My Old Kentucky Dinner Train excursion tours at Bardstown.)

U.K. President Eli Capilouto ranked No. 5.

4G LTE? CHECK.

Henderson has another feather in its technology cap, with the recent launch by AT&T of high-speed 4G LTE wireless service here.

The availability of broadband Internet service is both a convenience to local residents and businesses as well as one of the many tools necessary for economic development.

While we already have a mixture of wired and wireless broadband options in place for homes and businesses, smartphone users appreciate its availability, too.

Now, Henderson can boast of having the two fastest wireless services offered in the U.S., as judged by PC World: AT&T, whose 4G LTE signal was first available here late last year but became official just this month, and Verizon Wireless, which launched the service here a year ago.

FOR WHOM THE BRIDGE TOLLS

We're no closer to knowing when or if Kentucky will be able to undertake the estimated $1.4 billion construction of an Interstate 69 bridge across the Ohio River between Henderson and Evansville.

That's largely because the state is already engaged in the $2.6-billion project to build two new Ohio River interstate bridges at Louisville (while the pressure continues for a new I-75 bridge between northern Kentucky and Cincinnati).

But the Louisville project might shed light on how much vehicles would have to pay in tolls to help pay for a new bridge here.

A consultant for the Louisville bridges last week said tolls there would likely be $1 for a car or light truck with a "frequent user" transponder; $2 for other two-axle vehicles; $5 for medium-sized trucks; and $10 for heavy trucks.

Those assumed rates were presented to the Kentucky Public Transportation Infrastructure Authority, which will be selling toll revenue bonds to help finance the new bridge in downtown Louisville for northbound I-65 traffic.

For both the downtown crossing and a new bridge in eastern Jefferson County, Kentucky and Indiana officials plan all-electronic tolling that would eliminate the need for toll plazas that would slow traffic.

Local motorists could have electronic transponders in their vehicle that would send a signal to deduct funds from an established account when they cross a toll bridge; for others, a high-resolution camera would capture images of their license plate and send them a bill.

SKILLS
from 1D

The company has tripled in size over the last seven years.

"It's not easy finding people who are going to fit," Tenpenny says. "We needed someone who was able to handle a computer and utilize a digital die cutter."

Some of the students leave the company after they graduate. Tailored Label has hired several, and is paying for one of them to get his associate degree in technical manufacturing at a nearby community college.

A growing concern: Most of the headlines about the skilled-worker shortage have focused on manufacturing. But it also affects companies that offer services — marketing and construction firms, for example.

Estimates of how big the shortage is vary. The consulting firm Deloitte said in 2011 that 600,000 manufacturing jobs were unfilled at companies of all sizes because employers couldn't find workers with the right skills. Deloitte based that number on a survey it conducted with the Manufacturing Institute, an organization that researches issues in manufacturing.

By contrast, Boston Consulting Group puts the number of unfilled manufacturing jobs at 100,000, based on government statistics. But no matter how bad the shortage is now, it will get worse, says Harold Sirkin, a senior partner at the consultancy. He predicts that number will rise to 875,000 by the end of the decade as older, more skilled workers retire.

It will also deepen as specialized, high-tech manufacturing increases in the U.S., Sirkin says. A growing number of factories use computers and robots to produce components like airplane and automotive parts, and need workers who can run computers and complex machines.

A number of factors led to the shortage. At one time, manufacturing was the heart of the U.S. economy. But as millions of manufacturing jobs were lost — between 7.1 million between 1980 and 2009 according to the Brookings Institution — manufacturing became a less steady, reliable way to earn a living. It also doesn't appeal to people who might think of gritty factories filled with heavy equipment, not the new generation of cleaner and quieter workplaces.

"We've told our kids that working in manufacturing is not a good thing. In the past, it was mostly brawn and not much brain. Now its brains, not brawn," says Sirkin, who co-wrote a Boston Consulting Group report last September about the shortage.

But business owners in all industries contribute to the problem, says Peter Cappelli, a professor of human resources management at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School. He says many owners have an unrealistic expectation that they'll continually find skilled workers although ever-changing technology means new skills are needed.

Do-it-yourself training: Keats Manufacturing has five openings and three or four workers likely to retire in the near future, Chief Operating Officer Matt Eggemeyer says. The Wheeling, Ill.-based company, which has 110 employees, is already training the next generation of workers.

Keats manufactures metal parts used in vehicles, appliances and medical and electronic equipment. Because it does custom work, it needs employees who can continually adjust machinery to create different parts. It's labor-intensive work that takes years to learn to do well.

"Just being able to run the machine takes six months of training," Eggemeyer says. "Depending on the individual, it could be five years before they're really worth their salt."

Keats has tried advertising for help. Many candidates claimed they had the skills the company needed, but when they started working, it was clear they weren't qualified.

Eggemeyer compares Keats' training program with the minor league system in baseball. Employees are trained and rise through the ranks until they're considered highly skilled. It can take as long as 10 years for some to become expert tool and die makers — people who create the machinery used to make metal products.

Learning on the job isn't new, says David Zonderman, a professor of labor history at North Carolina State University. It was once common for companies to take on apprentices who were paid while they learned, and businesses often partnered with labor unions to create apprenticeship programs, Zonderman says.

The marriage of computers and manufacturing has forced many companies to do more of their own training, Zonderman says.

"Whenever there's a fairly rapid technology shift, both businesses and workers have to adjust," he says.

The teamwork approach: Technology has also created a skills deficit for companies that do marketing and public relations. The social media explosion has created a new way of getting publicity — a blurb on Facebook or 140-character posting on Twitter that bears little resemblance to the two-page news release that is the standard in public relations.

PR firms need people who are adept at all the methods, but few fit that description, says David Chapman, owner of Nine One Nine Marketing in Holly Springs, N.C.

"It's difficult to bring these two worlds together," Chapman says.

The problem is generational. Older staffers spent years writing news releases and don't think in terms of constantly posting short, quick tweets. Many younger staffers, meanwhile, haven't learned how to craft a longer story.

Chapman's solution is to team staffers so a client's message will reach all types of media. But that does mean more staffers working on an account than in the past.

"It's hurting productivity, and I can't necessarily bill my clients for that inefficiency," Chapman says.

The recruiting strategy: The super-high-skilled worker that Burt-Watts needs is going to be hard to find — and the company knows it, says Heather Merz, its chief financial officer.

The Austin, Texas, contracting company has done mostly interior work, but decided in 2011 it would expand its division that constructs buildings from the ground up.

It began looking for workers with highly specialized skills: They had to be knowledgeable about the Austin construction industry, specialize in "ground-up" construction and have connections with good subcontractors.

Burt-Watts decided that the usual methods of searching for candidates — advertising and word-of-mouth — might not work because of the job requirements.

"We started realizing, this may be a little more challenging than we thought," Merz says.

So the company decided to search more aggressively for candidates. It sends a team of recruiters to Texas colleges that grant degrees in construction, like Texas A&M.

They go to job fairs to interview students in much the same way that law firms and Fortune 500 companies do. The strategy also gives the company access to experienced job candidates through alumni offices.

AUCTION BOUND

Our policy is to keep our pre-owned inventory here no longer than 45 days (what we refer to in the industry as "fresh"). After 45 days, we tag the vehicle for transport to auction.

FAQs:

Is there anything wrong with the vehicle?
Please understand that before any vehicle is placed on our lot it is thoroughly inspected and reconditioned.
*(excludes vehicles marked "as is")

Why didn't the vehicle sell earlier?
Several scenarios may come into play – we may have several of the same make/model/ and color on our lot at the same time. Also, quite frankly, as much as we advertise, sometimes a person may not think to look here for a pre-owned Jeep or Mustang, etc.

What's the catch?
Nothing, our "fresh lot" policy is your gain. So, take a look at our "Auction Bound" inventory. You may find your next great vehicle here!
